Wall Street Reform Bill Bans Small Speculators

Rigid Control Proposed Without Comment of Roosevelt.

Complete Stock Data Required

Trade Volume Would Be Curtailed Sharply by Measure.

By Elliott Thurston.

The New Deal reached out yesterday to fasten an iron grip upon the stock exchanges.

Far more sweeping regulation, by the Federal Trade Commission, than had been expected is provided in the identical bills introduced in both branches of Congress yesterday coincident with President Roosevelt's special message assailing "naked speculation" and calling for Government supervision to end evils exposed by the Senate's investigation of Wall street.

The White House neither espouses nor disavows the 14,000-word, seemingly iron-clad bill which is sure to bring howls from bulls, bears as well as wolves of Wall street. A White House secretary took pains to inform the press that Mr. Roosevelt had not seen the measure—but was leaving the translation of his views into law to Congress.

Aim to Securities Act.

A small group of new dealers, some of whom had a hand in drafting the securities act—to which this bill is a companion piece—and Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate's investigation, produced the new measure. It would squeeze out, not only the small fry of the public gamblers in stocks bought on margin, but to protect the public at large it would banish speculators, tipsters, manipulators, market riggers, operators of pools, even the floor traders.

It would reform the stock exchanges so completely, require so much data from issuers of securities, and set up such controls for the avowed purpose of ending abuses and protecting the public, that the old order would be transformed beyond recognition, the volume of trading would be sharply curtailed, another stock market spree would be impossible, bank credit could not again be sluiced into the street—if, indeed, exchanges could continue to live. Some gloomy forebodings were heard last night to the effect that the bill would reform the stock exchange out of existence.

Hearings to Be Called.

It will take careful study and the hearings to be called by Senate and House committees to bring out fully the revolutionary implications in this first, far-reaching attempt to subject the exchanges to Federal

8 Children Die In Virginia Fire

Two Panic-Stricken Victims Rush Back in Flames After Rescue.

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Nothing but ashes remained tonight of the log cabin housing eight colored children who perished in flames early today on the J. B. Thompson farm, near Unison, Va.

One end of the cabin was in flames before Beverly Thomas, colored, his wife, and a baby, who were sleeping downstairs, were aroused.

Rushing to the second floor, where nine children were sleeping, six of his own and three of his brother's, Thomas carried two to safety. On his second trip down with the two others the stairs, already enveloped in flames, gave away and the two children fell into the fire. The father, burned, saved himself. The two saved on the first trip down became panic stricken and, dashing back into the flames, were burned to death.

The oldest boy, Beverly, jr., 9, jumped from a window and was saved. The mother and infant escaped from the lower floor uninjured. The ages of the children burned to death ranged from two to nine years.

The cabin was in a section of Loudoun County several miles distant from telephones and fire apparatus.

Dickens Manuscript's Value Set at $50,000

Philadelphia, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—A valuation of $50,000 was placed on the original manuscript of Charles Dickens' "Life of Christ" today by Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach. The London Daily Mail yesterday paid $15 a word for world rights to the hitherto unpublished manuscript.

"It is extremely difficult to set a price for such a manuscript," the noted collector said, "but basing its value on known prices brought by other manuscripts by Dickens I should say that $50,000 would be a fair estimate."

Hundreds Wounded In New Paris Rioting

Gendarme Slain, Two Churches Fired as Communists Reopen Street Fighting With "Anti-Fascist" Demonstration; Doumergue Forms Cabinet.

(Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press.)

Paris, Feb. 9.—Fatal gun battles flared anew tonight in working quarters of Paris, where Communists battled police, set fire to two churches and besieged public buildings.

One policeman was shot and killed. Hundreds of persons on both sides were wounded during the heavy shooting, while bands of shouting men ran through the district smashing windows and looting stores.

The rioters, who were demonstrating against the "wave of Fascism," enticed police to side streets, where women threw flowerpots on the struggling masses from upstairs windows.

The working-class district near the Place de la Republique—a mile square in area and the home of the notorious Apaches—was thrown into an uproar.

The churches of St. Joseph and St. Ambrose were set afire. The big and new East Railroad Station was sacked and the North Station was besieged. The neighborhood of the city hall was beleaguered.

Stone pavements were torn up to build barricades and for ammunition.

Troops of mounted guards rode into the fray and thousands of police sped through the streets in buses, while 16,000 troops awaited a call to action in their garrisons.

Many were wounded seriously, among them police who were shot and injured by bottles thrown from windows. They were taken to hospitals while others were treated at an emergency station in the Hotel Place de la Republique and drug stores. Hundreds were arrested.

The fighting began with a Communist attempt to march on the Place de la Republique for a demonstration to break "Fascism."

Authorities had forbidden the gathering.

Just a few hours earlier Premier Doumergue had formed a cabinet of "political truce" to restore order in riot-torn Paris and called upon the populace to renounce agitation and place "the interest of France and the republic above all else."

Labor Leader Found Guilty In Bank Fraud

Alvanley Johnston and Aid Face Long Prison Terms in $450,000 Loss.

Cleveland, Feb. 9 (AP).—One of the most prominent figures in organized labor, Alvanley Johnston, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, heard a jury of nine men and three women today declare him guilty of a $450,000 misapplication of funds of the now closed Standard Trust Co. He also was found guilty of making false entries.

C. Stirling Smith, former president of the bank which crashed in 1931 with more than $12,000,000 in deposits, was found guilty with Johnston on the same charges, but James H. Cassell, secretary-treasurer of the brotherhood, was acquitted. Cassell and Johnston were directors in the bank.

Sixteen hours were required by the jury to reach the verdict under which Smith and Johnston are liable to fines totaling $90,000 and to penitentiary sentences of 30 years on each of the nine counts of the conviction.

Sentences Delayed.

The jury found them not guilty on one other count and was unable to agree on an eleventh.

Both Smith and Johnston remained calm as the verdict was read. Attorneys said a motion for a new trial would be filed. Judge Virgil J. Terrell said he would not pass sentence until the three-day period for the filing expires.

Johnston, who started railroading as a call boy, and Cassell, formerly an engine fireman, were made directors of the Standard Trust in 1930, when it was organized and

Ice Covers Firemen In 30-Below Weather

North Bay, Ont., Feb. 9 (AP).—Fire was sweeping through the business section of North Bay today, as fire fighters, covered with ice from head to foot, battled in 30 degrees below zero temperature to check it.

Bremer, Near Collapse, Sobs Kidnap Story

Police Speed Extensive Search as Doctor Guards Banker.

St. Paul, Feb. 9 (AP).—Three weeks of pain and hunger, punctuated by threats of being chained to the bed in a darkened room by his kidnapers, left Edward G. Bremer in a state of semicollapse today.

Pinched by the memory of vicious blows rained upon his head with pistol butts, the 37-year-old banker interrupted the recital of his experiences today by sobbing once and almost swooning.

Simultaneously, Federal, State and city peace officers worked feverishly to track down the band that Bremer believes numbered 10 or 12, and that collected $200,000 ransom before his release Wednesday night at Rochester, Minn.

Have Few Clews.

The clews they had to work on: Bremer's ability to identify two of the gang; the two who beat him 15 or 20 times about the head and face until blood blinded his eyes when they stopped his automobile January 17.

His memory of the wallpaper design on the room in which he was held prisoner 22 days.

Meager details of the ransom payment trip made through Fairbault, Minn., on a lonely road Tuesday night by Walter Magee, wealthy contractor, friend and intermediary, and the strange car the gang placed at his disposal for the trip.

Barely had he commenced a recital of his experiences with Dr. H. T. Nippert, personal friend and physician, at his side, than his voice trembled; tears welled into his eyes, and he raised a hand to his head. He had just told how, after leaving his 8-year-old daughter, Betty, at the exclusive Summit Girls' School,

Coast Guard Hurries To Aid Burning Ship

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—The Coast Guard tug Saukee and the tug Relief were speeding from Key West today to the assistance of the American steamship Ozark, reported on fire 120 miles southwest of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Coast Guardsmen Battle Ice, Save Sinking Vessel's Crew

Eastham, Mass., Feb. 9 (AP).—Seven Coast Guardsmen waged a thrilling battle against the sea today in saving the lives of five men who had abandoned their disabled schooner, the Anna Sophia, of New York.

Dawn showed the schooner at anchor a mile and a half off shore. She was deep in the water and seas rolled over her. Her poles were bare, stripped by a squall as she was doubling Cape Cod. Her skipper, Capt. John Peabody, of Beals, Maine, considered her position so dangerous that a dory was lowered and all hands went over the side.

Many eyes ashore watched the mariners as they approached the breakers, three-fourths of a mile off shore. Boatswain George Nickerson, 60-year-old skipper of the Nauset Coast Guard Station, fearing the dory could not survive the surf gave the word to launch the station's surf boat.

For two miles he and his men were forced to carry the boat down the beach before they came to an opening in the piled-up ice. Every man was drenched before the lifeboat was well afloat and sub-zero temperature almost instantly froze their clothing.

Once clear of the shore the lifeboat had only floe ice to contend with until it reached the outer bar. The transfer of the schooner's crew was quickly accomplished and a hard pull through the ice and into the surf again got all hands safe ashore.

Automobiles rushed them to the Coast Guard station, where a doctor attended to frostbitten fingers, noses and ears.

10 Below Due Today; Score Dead as Cold Grips Nation

Suffering Grows Here as 6½ Mark Sets 22-Year Record.

Traffic Is Crippled; Accident Toll High

Many School Children Frostbitten; Relief to Be Gradual.

Washington suffered with the entire Northeast and Middle West sections of the country yesterday in one of the most severe cold waves of history.

The temperature of 6½ degrees below zero here yesterday will be surpassed this morning, the Weather Bureau announced, with a reading of 10 below.

Respite from the cold wave will be slow in coming, the forecaster said. Today's temperature will rise slightly and a further slight rise is in store for tomorrow.

More than a score of persons have died as the result of the cold which has set new all-time low temperature records in many cities of the East.

22-Year Record Here.

Death, fires, marine disasters, hunger and physical suffering have accompanied the cold which was caused by a "high" which moved rapidly down from north central Canada.

Subzero temperatures ranged from 59 degrees below at Old Forge, N. Y., to 1 degree below at Richmond, Va. Lake Erie and Lake Ontario are frozen over.

It was the coldest day in New York City since the Weather Bureau opened 64 years ago—it was 14.3 below zero at 7:25 a. m., the Associated Press said.

Untold suffering was recorded in Washington yesterday with the lowest temperature in 22 years. Traffic was disrupted, school children frostbitten and many persons injured in accidents blamed on the cold.

The fire hazard mounted with many of the hydrants in the city frozen. Emergency crews of firemen last night were busy in thawing out the frozen pipes.

Potomac Frozen Over.

The Potomac, except near here where the harbor police attempted to keep the channel open, was frozen entirely across as far down stream as Indianhead, Md.

The reading of 6½ degrees below zero was the official temperature of the Weather Bureau. Much lower readings were reported unofficially.

In Takoma Park and Chevy Chase thermometers recorded 8 degrees below. At Norbeck, Md., it was 13 below. All of the outdoor workers of the Civil Works Administration here, 6,000 in number, were laid off because of the cold. They will not work today if, as probable, like temperatures prevail.

This lay-off of more than a third of the 17,000 workers in the District will cost the affected workers approximately $16,000 a day.

School Children Frostbitten.

Ten children arrived at the Taft Junior High School with frostbitten fingers. They were treated by Mrs. E. R. Wilson, the school matron.

Five firemen were treated for frostbitten ears and exposure after fighting a fire for three hours in an occupied house in Woodside, Md.,

"Eagle" Speaker's Tour Is Canceled

Dr. F. V. Fisher Recalled After Protests Break.

Portland, Ore., Feb. 9 (AP).—Dr. Frederick Vining Fisher, a National field representative for NRA, was abruptly recalled to San Francisco today, and speaking engagements he had at Seattle and other Washington cities were canceled.

Whether his recall was due to criticism of a group of Eugene ministers, who resented what they described as his "spellbinding" and "propaganda methods," could not be learned.

Shirl Blalock, NRA office manager at Seattle, advised the Portland office only that Louis J. Alber, chief of the NRA speakers' division at Washington, D. C., had ordered the immediate cancellation of Dr. Fisher's engagements.

Now Maybe He'll Find Pleasure in Business

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP).—By court order today, Mrs. Alexander W. Grim must stop following her husband, a hook and ladder man, to fires.

The injunction was granted by Judge Rudolph F. Desort after Grim's attorney had related how Mrs. Grim followed her husband to various conflagrations for the express purpose of throwing cold water on any romances Grim might be tempted into while rescuing night-gowned women.

Roosevelt Cancels Air Mail Contracts; Army Planes to Fill Breach

Underwood & Underwood.

Attorney General Cummings and Postmaster General Farley are shown at the Justice Department yesterday discussing the much disputed air mail business with advisers. Shortly afterward blanket cancellation of air mail contracts was announced by President Roosevelt. Left to right, Col. Carl Ristine, special assistant to Mr. Cummings in charge of air mail matters; Mr. Cummings, Mr. Farley, and Karl Crowley, solicitor of the Postoffice Department.

President Believes His Action Warranted by Fraud Evidence.

Move Seen Doom For Private Lines

Air Line Stocks Drop on West Coast Exchange Following Order.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Charging fraud and collusion, President Roosevelt yesterday directed the cancellation of all air mail contracts with domestic companies—thus reshaping, is not collapsing, the Nation's network of private transport concerns.

To take their place, he called on the Army air corps, whose swift observation planes and bombers will convey all air mail, beginning a week from Monday. Out of this temporary expedient was seen the development of a Government air mail.

Faced with disclosures of the Black investigating committee, the President cut a Gordian knot in characteristic fashion, at one bold stroke lopping off all subsidy to air mail transport and projecting the Government into its place.

Believes Action Warranted.

He announced the cancellation, in unruffled manner, at his regular press conference, explaining he was acting on what was believed to be sufficient evidence of fraud and collusion in awarding the contracts, which were handled by former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown, of the Hoover Administration.

With a smile as this momentous news quieted the throng of correspondents grouped about his desk, he turned to confer for a moment with Postmaster General James A. Farley, who, as head of the department concerned, a few minutes later actually signed the order canceling the contracts, effective February 19.

The Postmaster General, the Secretaries of War and Commerce, the President continued, are to cooperate to assure a continuance of the air mail, the War Department furnishing all necessary planes, pilots, fields and equipment. Beyond that, action was so swift no plans were developed.

Questioned if this meant new bidding for air contracts or the extension of the Postoffice Department into the field of air transport—an inevitable choice which now confronts the Administration—the President said he was unable yet to answer.

Private Industry Doomed.

Belief was widespread, however, that the abrogation of all existing contracts doomed mail transport as a private industry, that the next step would be the development of another Federal service. This opinion was strengthened by the law, which prevents companies whose contracts have been withdrawn from bidding again for a period of five years.

In an impromptu interview closely following the President's

Grand Jurors Hunt 'Insiders' In Army Probe

'Crookedness or Dumbness' Charged by Collins; 4 Colonels Quizzed.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

The Federal grand jury's inquiry into the alleged conspiracy to defraud the Government through the handling of army automobile and truck purchases took a new turn yesterday when the jury undertook to ascertain whether anyone in the War Department was working with the conspirators.

Apparently satisfied it has heard sufficient evidence to indict at least three persons outside of the department, including two persons prominent in American Legion activities, the grand jury carried its probe directly into the department yesterday by questioning five Army officers as to their knowledge of changes in specifications for the motor bids.

It was indicated that in all probability Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, in charge of the motor contracts, would be recalled for further questioning. He was the first witness to appear in the investigation, being required then, as have been all witnesses, to sign waivers of immunity before testifying.

Rep. Collins Started Inquiry.

Meanwhile Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi, who is now revealed as the person who inspired the inquiry, issued a statement to the effect that if it is impossible to establish that persons in the Federal employ had "profited" from the motor transactions, then he looked for "some removals to occur, because, as I heard a member of Congress say the other day, 'There either has been crookedness or gross dumbness.'"

Mr. Collins, chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee in charge of the War Department appropriation bill, added that "there is no room for either in our public service."

Army Planes' Speed Reduced.

Mr. Collins made his statement after a hearing by the House Military Affairs Committee into Army airplane purchases. It was brought out at this hearing that specifications for airplanes to be built out of a $7,500,000 PWA allotment had been changed by Mr. Woodring over the objection of Army aviation officers.

The Air Corps specified, for instance, that pursuit planes should

Post News Story Brings Girl Joy; Sled Is Returned

Dorothy McCarty, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCarty, is happy again. She has her sled back.

Dorothy's mother read in yesterday's Post that park police were holding a sled and bicycle which had been found in Rock Creek-Potomac Parkway. It might be—anyway Mrs. McCarty called headquarters.

Via telephone, she identified the sled, which had been stolen from their home at 2218 Cathedral avenue, Mr. McCarty called for it.

There were a number of telephone calls about the red, solid-tired bicycle, but none from the owner. It is still held.

Alcorn, Sankey Aid, Gets Life

Pleads Guilty to Charge in Boettcher Seizure, Quickly Sentenced.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Feb. 9 (AP).—A life sentence for Gordon Alcorn today followed the suicide of Verne Sankey in his prison cell last night, and wrote an end to the criminal careers of the principals in the $60,000 ransom kidnaping of Charles Boettcher II, Denver broker.

While Sankey, leader in the abduction a year ago, lay dead by his own hand, Alcorn pleaded guilty to conspiracy to kidnap for ransom, and was immediately sentenced to life imprisonment.

Brought into Federal Court still visibly shaken by Sankey's suicide in a State Prison cell only one removed from his own, Alcorn was in the custody of the U. S. Marshal's office slightly more than 10 minutes later, awaiting transportation to Leavenworth.

Officials announced he would probably be started for the Federal prison tonight.

Pale and plainly nervous, the 27-year-old kidnaper stood with bowed head as the indictment was read by District Attorney Olaf Eidem.

"Guilty," he said clearly when asked as to his plea.

Senate Defied As MacCracken Evades Arrest

Three Other Defendants to Stand Trial on Contempt Charge.

By Martha Dalrymple.

William P. MacCracken, former Government air official and former Chicago Sunday school teacher, successfully eluded arrest by the Senate all day yesterday. But three air-line officials, his co-defendants, stood trial before that body on a charge of contempt.

Col. L. H. Brittin, vice president of Northwest Airways; Harris M. Hanshue, president of Transcontinental and Western Air, and Gilbert L. Givvin, Washington representative, sat placidly in the office of the Senate sergeant at arms, while the chamber heard that their Washington lawyer-lobbyist defendant here refused to appear and while a warrant for the delinquent's arrest was rushed through.

Although Brittin registered a formal protest that the Senate did not have power to punish him, the other two complacently accepted the Senates' decision to try them, offering only prepared statements in defense of their admitted removal from MacCracken's office of records under subpena.

After a brief questioning of Brittin, the Senate adjourned to 11 a. m. today. It is hoped to conclude the examinations of all three men in time to secure a decision late in the day.

If the Senate arrest warrant is served on MacCracken and if he does not obtain freedom through a writ of habeas corpus, his Senate trial will probably be postponed until next week.

While Chesley Jurney, the frock-coated and very busy sergeant at arms, rushed out with a Senate warrant in his pocket, the Senate suspended the whole air-mail investigation. But on Jurney's return at 3 p. m. with the news that he was Trial Abroad for Triple Gang Killing Indicated.

Rome, Feb. 9 (AP).—Extradition of Giuseppe (Big Mike) Spinelli to the United States for trial in Pittsburgh growing from the gang slaying of three brothers was refused today by Pietro De Francisci, minister of justice.

Intention of prosecuting Spinelli in Italy on the charges was indicated.

U. S. Will Ask 32-Hour Week To Make Jobs

NRA Meeting March 5 Is Called to Shift CWA Burden to Business.

(Associated Press.)

Determination on the part of the Administration to move for a basic 32-hour work week in American industry was indicated yesterday in an announcement by Hugh S. Johnson that he would be ready to put forward an expanded industrial reemployment program by March 5.

That date was set yesterday for a mass meeting of code authorities at which the control groups of from 275 to 300 industries will be assembled to coordinate and revise NRA's code structure.

It is not proposed to force an hour reduction demand on industrial groups by Administration fiat, but a chief objective of the meeting will be to try shouldering onto private initiative during the spring and summer months a large share of the employment now supported by the Government through CWA.

Will Affect Tradesmen.

To reporters' questions, Johnson said yesterday he was strongly wedded to the idea that the work day should be kept at eight hours, and that the reduction in work time needed to make more jobs should be obtained by lopping off wherever possible one whole day from the present work week which under NRA generally has been stabilized at 40 hours.

"My idea is built up on an eight hour day," he said. "My information from actual laboring men—I haven't talked with the leaders so much, but I always ask the men in the groups I see—is that they prefer it. They would rather have four days at eight hours than five days at six hours or a six-day week with five hours. They want those whole days.

"Of course, I am not saying exactly what will happen because I haven't made it up in my own mind. The bulk of unemployment is in the heavy industries. We can't do anything about that here; that is up to somebody else. Whatever we do will have to be in the white collar class and in large measure in trade. 'Consumer goods' industries will employ people.

Will Avoid Flat Demand.

His reference to heavy industries was taken to mean that only small reemployment benefits may be obtained from them until they receive additional orders for material, machinery, equipment, &s., and that other cogs of the Federal recovery machine must furnish the stimulation to produce those orders.

He made clear there would be no flat demand for every industry to adopt the 32-hour week.

"Many have eaten up their reserves and when you ask them to increase their costs, especially on contracts ahead, well, they have no means to finance ther payrolls—you can throw a man into bankruptcy that way like nobody's business," he said.

Johnson said a report had been submitted to him by a committee named to work out with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Federal Reserve and private agencies a program to expand commercial credit so that business may go ahead on more than a hand-to-mouth basis.

Will Answer Criticism March 5.

He said the question of "job insurance" would not come up at the March meeting "because there is too much to be taken up then anyway."

By March 5, Johnson said, he will have worked out definite policies on what will and will not be allowed to continue in codes in the way of regulation of price control, discounts and other practices which hav beeen under fire.

The Administrator was asked if he intended placing his views on shortening work hours before the House Labor Committee which will continue next week its hearings on a 30-hour week bill.

"I was asked to appear the other day and I was ill," he replied, "and I have not been asked again."

Dillinger Trial Set March 12

Judges Enter Not Guilty Plea as Gangster Stands Mute.

Crown Point, Ind., Feb. 9 (AP).—Denied freedom on a writ of habeas corpus, John Dillinger today heard his trial for murder of a policeman set for March 12.

Freed of manacles during his court appearance, the desperado stood mute when asked if he wished to plead guilty or not guilty, and Judge William J. Murray, at the suggestion of defense counsel, entered a plea of not guilty.

Prosecutor Robert G. Estill announced later that defense lawyers had told him that Dillinger would plead guilty in return for a pledge that the death penalty would not be asked. Estill said he refused.

Defense Attorneys Joseph Ryan and Louis Piquett denied they had made any such offer.

Bitter wrangling between prosecution and defense punctuated the court hearing, as Ryan demanded a delay of 120 days in which to prepare his case and Estill retorted that 10 days should be ample.

"That would be legal murder; there's a law against lynching in this State," Piquett shouted in reply. The prosecutor shouted back, "Yes, and there's a law against murder, too."

Bremer Traces Long Captivity, Held Weeks Without Exercise

Was Kept in Chair or Bed During 3 Weeks of Captivity.

Instructed How to Get Home Without Being Known.

By Edward G. Bremer.

St. Paul, Feb. 9 (AP).—I left the baby at school I think about 8:20 a. m. January 17 and drove to the corner of Goodrich and Lexington avenue, but stopped for the arterial highway. As I stopped the left door of the car was opened and a right arm was extended through the door with a gun pointed toward me. A gruff voice said, "Don't move or I'll kill you."

I quickly put the car in low gear to cross the street and looked up and saw a car squarely in front of my car. I placed my left foot through the door. By this time the man who had opened the left door apparently had got inside my car.

Struck Many Times.

He began striking me over the head and must have hit me 15 or 20 times. I tried to get out the right door and bumped into something there and it apparently was another man who also struck me over the head. My eyes became filled with blood and I was dazed. They pushed my head down under the dash board. Meanwhile my left foot was still outside the door, for I had been thinking all the time that someone surely would see me, as many people were taking their children to school at that time of day.

Finally, I don't know when, they pulled my leg into the car and we started out. We drove a while, I don't know where, but it must have been 15 minutes later that they stopped the machine. They put goggles over my eyes and told me to get out. I distinctly remember the commands to get out of the car, which I did. Then they placed me in another machine and I was told to lie down.

Watch Taken Away.

My watch was taken away, they told me was for identification purposes. They asked me who I would like to have as contact man and I mentioned Walter Magee. They then asked me who else they could get in touch with and I mentioned the names of several boys whom I was reared with out at the brewery.

I was told to sign some notes, but I don't know whether they were signed at that stop or a later stop. The car started and we drove and stopped again many hours later. It was perhaps at that stop I signed certain notes.

At this stop there was undoubtedly another car accompanying us. I was at the bottom of the car and couldn't see or hear much. They refilled the car with gas. We again started and drove until it must have been dark. They later told me I could sit on the seat because no one could see me after dark. We again stopped and this time the escort car left us.

Walked for Warmth.

I was awfully cold so I asked if I could walk up and down. They walked with me so I could warm up.

Then the car returned and I again was put into the machine. We drove several hours more and there was another stop. Here I was taken out of the car and led some distance, where we went downstairs. I sat on a chair. Then they examined my hea dand washed off the cuts as best they could.

I told them to cut the hair off because I would rather have that done than to have an infection set in. After that, they put some water in front of me and when they took off the bandages it was dark.

I washed my hands and face as best I could and then I again was bandaged up and put to bed.

Undoubtedly it was the next morning that they put me back on the chair and served me with breakfast. I sat on that chair until I was put to bed.

Kept Same Routine.

That routine kept on all the time I was in the room. The only time I walked was when they took me to the bathroom. After the first week the leg I had stretched out of the car to prevent them from closing the door went out onme , and I could not walk the entire week. They sort of pulled me around.

The morning they told me arrangements were made for my release they started to shave me, to which I objected. The job lasted one hour, they said.

They took me outside, placed me in the bottom of a car surrounded by gasoline cans, and drove constantly, except for one stop, until dark. At this stop they took the cans out. Then they allowed me to sit on the seat, since it was after dark, and they left two attendants with me. They told me they were going to find out whether or not the money was marked.

I told them I did not believe the money was marked. After a while they returned and I was told it was all right. We were nearing Rochester, they told me.

Gave Instructions.

Then they said: "We will put you off on a dark street in Rochester. You are to get out of the car when you are told and face in the direction, which, however, is not the direction in which you are to walk. You are to count up to 15 very slowly before you remove the bandages. Then turn about face and go to the Rochester bus depot and take the 9:40 bus to St. Paul. When you arrive in St. Paul you are to get off before you get to the bus depot, get into a cab, and get to your house without anyone seeing you so that there will be absolutely nothing in the morning paper."

I got out of the kidnapers' car. I heard the car leave. I counted 15 but L heard their car stop, so I did not remove the bandages. After the car started again I removed the bandages and I could just make out a light.

I walked several blocks and then asked a man the way to the bus depot. There was no bus to St. Paul that night. A lady at the depot called a taxi and I went to the railway station and bought a ticket to Owatonna.

At Owatonna I got into a cab and caught a bus, I asked the driver to stop after he passed the Wabasha street bridge. Then I caught another taxi and went home.

Bremer Under Doctor's Care, Near Collapse After Release his car was blocked when he stopped for an arterial highway.

Doctor Cheers Him.

Dr. Nippert cheered the erstwhile captive by assuring him that "this will be very brief."

Regaining his composure and drying his eyes with a handkerchief, Bremer told how two men rained blows upon him when they invaded his automobile, warning him: "Don't move or I'll kill you!"

When one thug opened one door of the car and Bremer stuck out his leg to prevent the closing of it, the gangster slammed the door on his leg above the knee. It is still bruised.

After being slugged, Bremer was taken for a ride of 15 minutes, then blindfolded with goggles and transferred to another car. Later, the gang stopped and the banker "signed some notes."

The journey was resumed, Bremer recounted, and he finally was taken to a house where his head wounds were washed and he was blindfolded with bandages.

Again Blindfolded.

Dr. Nippert felt his pulse and advised him, "Better cut the story short," after feeling his pulse. Bremer placed a hand to his head and observed, "My head aches."

Finally, the hour to release him arrived. Blinfolded, he was again placed in a car and told he would be taken to Rochester. En route a stop was made while some of the gang went out "to find out whether or not the money was marked."

Bremer obeyed orders upon his release in Rochester on a dark street with the blindfold still over his eyes. He counted up to 15 slowly, faced about and walked to the bus depot, when he was supposed to take a bus to St. Paul and go to his father's home without being seen.

"After the car started again I removed the bandages and I could just make out a light. I turned the right direction and started to walk. I walked around in circles first and then tried to walk straight so that no one would become suspicious by seeing me stagger."

Missed Bus.

Bremer, however, missed the bus at Rochester, took a train to Owatonna and connected with the bus. He managed to reach the home of his father, Adolph Bremer, about midnight Wednesday.

At the interview Bremer did not reveal the number of men he believed were in the gang, that point being omitted, it was understood, at the request of authorities.

Other details officers thought might hamper their efforts to round up the band also were omitted. Bremer, wearing a dressing robe and slippers, was attired in a white shirt, open at the throat. He was pale and wan, quite nervous, upset. He appeared to be ready to collapse.

Authority

Farley Quotes Law for His Action.

The order of Postmaster General Farley, canceling all domestic airmail contracts, was given under a statute covering "combinations to prevent bids," the Associated Press said.

Farley, in issuing his order, said he did it under "authority vested in me by Section 3950" of the United States Statutes. The section heads as follows:

"No contract for carrying the mail shall be made with any person who has entered, or proposed to enter, into any combination to prevent the making of any bid for carrying the mail, or who has made any agreement, or given or performed or promised to give or perform, any consideration whatever to induce any other person not to bid for any such contract; and if any person so offending is a contractor for carrying the mail, his contract may be annulled, and for the first offense the person so offending shall be disqualified to contract for carrying the mail for five years, and for the second offense shall be forever disqualified."

Dollfuss Plans Punishment Of Socialists

General Strike Due if Dissolution Results From Plot Expose.

Vienna, Feb 9 (AP).—The belief that the Austrian government will follow the sensational expose of an alleged Marxist plot with the dissolution of the Socialist party was expressed today in Socialist circles, where it was said a general strike would thereby be precipitated.

Government spokesmen, on the other hand, pointed out that "all evidence" collected in police raids on Socialist centers yesterday "will be carefully examined before a further move is to be expected."

Meanwhile, the Agrarian party—which still has one minister and one secretary in the government—published an appeal addressed to Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss "in this earnest and decisve hour" to reorganize the government.

The chancellor returned from Budapest today after two days of conferences with Premier Julius Goemboes of Hungary.

Agragarians asked reorganization on a basis which would include all christian and national elements in the population and which would abandon the policy of punishing citizens for their political beliefs.

This was considered particularly interesting in view of reports that peace negotiations with Nazis had been resumed in Berlin.

The cabinet, meanwhile, met tonight to discuss the internal political situation, including the so-called Marxist plot and the setting up of a Fascist provincial commission in the Tyrol by the Heimwehr recently.

Before the meeting the Fascist leaders Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg and Richard Steidle conferred with Dollfuss in connection with the Home Guard action in the Tyrol and other provinces.

Domestic Air Mail Awards Are Abrogated

Roosevelt Orders Army to Fill Breach After Discontinuance.

action, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, paced the floor enthusiastically at this new opportunity for the Army, which he emphatically declared is ready and thoroughly competent to take over the difficult air mail.

Reaction in other quarters was not so jubilant, as holders of air transport stock awaited a falling market, foreshadowed by a sharp drop on the San Francisco exchange, still open when the news broke. Affected are 14 airline companies, mostly owned, however, by huge holding companies.

An executive order was signed immediately by the President to care for the emergency. It follows:

"Whereas, by an order of the Postmaster General of the United States all domestic air mail contracts for carrying the mails have been annulled; and

"Whereas, the public interest requires that air mail service continue to be afforded and the cancellation of said contracts has created an emergency in this respect;

"Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, do hereby order and direct that the Postmaster General, Secretary of War and Secretary of Commerce, together with other officers of their respective departments, cooperate to the end that necessary air mail service be afforded.

Army Equipment Ordered Ready.

"It is further ordered and directed that the Secretary of War place at the disposal of the Postmaster General such airplanes, landing fields, pilots, and other employes and equipment of the Army of the United States needed or required for the transportation of mail, during the present emergency, by air over routes and schedules prescribed by the Postmaster General."

Mr. Farley, who has spent most of the last two days in conference, declared in a morning statement he had "ample power to deal with the airmail situation." Following his abrogation of the contracts, he issued this statement:

"This order annulling the existing domestic airmail contracts has been issued after careful and deliberate study of the entire situation, which study included conferences between myself and other officials of the Postoffice Department with the President and with the Attorney General and other representatives of the Department of Justice. All have concurred in the decision reached.

"The entire matter was canvassed this morning at the Department of Justice in a conference participated in by myself, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Karl A. Crowley, Solicitor of the Postoffice Department; Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General; Col. Carl L. Fistine, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Angus D. MacLean, Assistant Solicitor General, and Alexander Holtzoff, Special Assistant to the Attorney General.

Cabinet Approves Decision.

"Following the Cabinet meeting this afternoon, a conference was held between the President, the Attorney General and myself, and it was at this conference that a final decision was reached."

Although some action was expected from the President, in view of the Senate investigation, nothing so drastic as a complete overthrow of the present system had been indicated. None had thought he would turn to the Army—the only agency so equipped—to carry on the airmail.

The 12 companies cut from airmail service, which last year netted them $19,400,264 from the Government, are American Airways, Inc.; National Air Transport, Inc.; Western Air Express, Inc.; Boeing Air Transport, Inc.; Pacific Air Transport, Northwest Airways, Inc.; Kohler Aviation Corporation, Pennsylvania Airlines, Inc.; Eastern Air Transport, Inc.; National Parks Airways, Inc.; United States Airways, Inc., and Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc.

Lines not affected are companies in foreign service, including Pan-American Airways, Inc.; Johnson Airways, Inc.; Seattle-Victoria Air Mail, Inc., and Canadian Colonial Airways, Inc.

Confronted with the problem of substituting a new system of its own over this vast network, the Administration was in for feverish activity for the next ten days. The Army bent immediately to its task, and last night first orders went out to air stations apprising them of their commander in chief's decision.

It was thought inevitable that many branch lines would be abandoned during the emergency period While complete confidence was expressed by Postoffice officials and Gen. MacArthur, the magnitude of the job was obvious. The Commerce Department was expected to help by offering the inspectors and facilities of its Bureau of Aeronautics.

Air Officials Stunned.

Airline officials were reported "stunned" by the President's order. One official was quoted by the Associated Press to the effect "this means we're all washed up." They said the companies would be unable to operate passenger service without its mail counterpart; that passenger traffic would be virtually stalled until private mail flying is resumed.

"Mails Will Go Through."

While the exhilaration of newfound work forced him to pace about his office, Gen. MacArthur declared to newspapermen, "the Army has the resources and the will to make the mails go through * * * the Army has the planes, the pilots and the wherewithal to do what the President has in mind."

He said the Army has between 1,200 and 1,300 flying officers, any one of whom could fly the mail in a pinch. The Army has from 1,600 to 1,700 planes of all kinds, but only the 800 or 900 observation, or cargo planes are particularly suited for the work. Some of the speedier bombers, however, might be needed to keep up the time schedule.

"Unquestionably," the chief of staff added, "every landing field will be available to the Army pilots. Practically all air fields are either military of public fields; few are privately owned. The routing, beacons and other aids to regular service will be available to the Army."

He then disclosed that if any air mail pilots are discharged as a result of the change the Army is prepared to take them in. If members of the Officers Reserve Corps—as most of them are—they would become officers; otherwise, some other placement would be found, since "it is not the Administration's idea to work them any hardship." He paid them glowing tribute for efficiency and daring, and added Air Corps pay would be commensurate with their present salaries.

Confident of Success.

"I have the utmost confidence," he continued, "the Army will handle the air mail in a magnificent way. I believe it will illustrate again the Army's ability to adjust itself to requirements—as demonstrated by its organization of the CCC. This will be another example of the Army's preparedness to take every call on it in its stride."

He recalled smilingly that 100 years ago the Army was called on to take care of the fastest mail of the time—the pony express; that the Army originated air mail itself only a decade ago. Passenger service is not contemplated, he said, adding extra expense occasioned by the mail service will be borne by the Postoffice Department.

While thus the Air Corps was in for a plentitude of the flying hours curtailed by last spring's economy act, Gen. MacArthur said no arrangements had yet been worked out. Planes will be rushed into service during the next week, however, and assigned to posts throughout the Nation in accordance with instructions from the Postmaster General.

owned by J. Donald Claggett, general counsel of the Washington-Suburban Sanitary Commission.

The blaze, discovered in the early morning by J. B. Stewart, was thought to have been set by tramps who were attempting to keep warm in the house. The frame residence was badly damaged. The cold hampered firemen, several hoses freezing and bursting.

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, of police headquarters, issued orders to all commanding officers yesterday to give policemen doing outside duty an opportunity to get warm at intervals during the extreme cold weather. Similar orders were issued to suburban officers.

A dozen or more mallards and canvasbacks had to be rescued yesterday at Roaches Run, on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, after they had become frozen to the ice. Some of them were the North Carolina ducks recently shipped to the Capital. The others were wild birds which have since joined the game sanctuary.

Welfare Agencies Taxed.

A great many fires were reported yesterday and firemen were kept busy in the bitter cold answering alarms. Blame for many of the blazes was laid to overlaboring furnaces. None of the fires caused great damage.

Welfare agencies of the city and neighboring counties were taxed. The homeless crowded missions and relief agencies. Many sought warmth in police stations.

Coal dealers reported the greatest buying rush in years. Deliveries were being made late last night to homes where the supply had run low.

Frozen switches at water tanks held up trains from the North for two and three hours in the early morning. Street cars, crowded with the extraordinary traffic due to incapacitated automobiles, were tied up at several points during the morning.

In Pennsylvania, according to the Associated Press, five persons were dead, and many injured as the coldest weather the State has experienced in many years held on. Temperatures ranged from 40 and 30 degrees below zero in the vicinity of Kane and the Pocono Mountains to 8 below in the McConnellsville coke regions.

Heavy Snow in Virginia.

For the first time in many years the tributaries and shallow water of Chesapeake Bay were frozen. Near Crisfield, Md., the Coast Guard was busy extricating oyster and fishing boats from the ice. Ice was reported as thick as seven inches.

In Southern Virginia, near the south rim of the cold, heavy snow accompanied the subzero temperatures. At Staunton, the Associated Press reported, there was 4 inches of snow with a minimum temperature reading of 6 degrees below.

A death, due to exposure, was recorded at West Point, where Herndon Clarke, 41, an electric welder, was found dead in his automobile.

Richmond temperature low was 1 below, the coldest since 1899.

For the first time within the memories of oldest inhabitants, icebergs appeared off Cape Cod, the United Press reported. Three bergs were seen, all large enough to be a real menace to navigation.

At Eastham, Mass., the Associated Press reported, Coast Guardsmen launched life boats in ice-filled seas and rescued six fishermen from their disabled schooner, weighted down with frozen ice.

Many Records Fall.

At Boston, United Press dispatches said, a new all-time cold record was established—18 degrees below zero. The all-time record at New Haven, Conn., was broken with a reading of 15 below.

At Annapolis, Md., a reading of 6 degrees below zero was recorded. Ferry service to Claibourne and Matapeake was discontinued, and Chesapeake Bay shipping faces a complete tie-up.

At Hagerstown, Md., two fires and an explosion were blamed upon the cold, which reached 10 degrees below zero. An explosion of frozen pipes at Cumberland, Md., damaged a garage and store.

Although the temperature at Norfolk, Va., was 6 degrees above zero, yesterday was the coldest day in 16 years. With the cold came reports of vessels battling high winds at sea.

Skaters at Memorial Pool Fall on Own Responsibility

Hardy Souls Find Ice Is So Rough It Has a Bowery Accent.

A few hundred hardy souls who came to skate and stayed to do some miniature mountain climbing enlivened the ragged and jagged surface of Lincoln Memorial Pool yesterday and last night. The ice was so rough it had a Bowery accent.

It was thick enough to support Kate Smith but, because of its uninviting complexion, wasn't called upon to accommodate more than a few score fans at a time. Measurement by park officials yesterday morning showed 5½ inches, which is more ice than the reflecting pool has ever had.

Heroic efforts were made early in the day to smooth things over, but to no avail. Authorities first tried to flood the pool with an ordinary garden hose. The water became ice as soon as it left the nozzle. Then spraying was resorted to. That failed. The hose burst. The authorities left.

The same authorities were undecided for some time afterward whether to permit skating after nightfall, because the place is unlighted. Finally they decided in the affirmative.

Inquiry at park police headquarters last night revealed skaters may come and go as late as they please but, if they fall, it will be on their own responsibility.

Railroad Blocked By 27-Car Wreck

Crew Escaped Injury in Mammoth Pileup.

Momence, Ill., Feb. 9 (AP).—A great snarl of wreckage blocked the main line of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad today where 27 freight cars plunged from the track last night and piled up in a ravine on the right of way.

Not one member of the train crew was hurt in the spectacular accident.

The wreck occurred when a truck on one of the cars broke, and the 26 cars following crashed into a heap.

took over the brotherhood's own National Bank and several smaller institutions. Smith, a banker by profession, came here from Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

$450,000 Loan Involved.

One of the deals involved in that merger—a guaranty of $904,000 of the brotherhood bank's assets to the Standard Trust which took them over—furnished the background of the trial.

The State contended the brotherhood borrowed $450,000 from a New York bank for the benefit of the Cleveland bank, but instead of the brotherhood paying the loan, it was paid by the Standard Trust, and allegedly false entries were made concerning the arrangement.

The defense claimed payment by the Standard Trust was entirely proper, holding that it was the only beneficiary of the loan.

Bank's Pen Proves Bomb in Disguise; Now Victim Sues

Richmond, Feb. 9 (AP).—In a suit growing out of injuries suffered when he picked up a tear gas bomb by mistake for a pountain pen, Herman C. Green today asked for a judgment of $35,000 against the Southern Bank and Trust Co., of Richmond.

Green charges that he was in the lobby of a branch of the bank December 15, and was invited to use the telephone by a teller.

The teller showed him a desk, he alleged, on which there was a fountain pen bomb. Preparing to write a check, he picked up the pen, and inadvertently discharged the load of tear gas full into his face and eyes.

Green charged the bank was guilty of gross negligence, and alleged that the gas had rendered him "blind and disordered, injuring him permanently, and causing him great financial loss."

Vocational Rehabilitation Is Topic of Conference.

Vocational rehabilitation activities of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration was discussed at a meeting here yesterday of District and Maryland field agents and members of the Office of Education.

Among those attending were John A. Kratz, chief of the Office of Education's vocational rehabilitation division; W. F. Faulkes, supervisor for Wisconsin; R. C. Sight-Seeing Tax Exemptions Hit Privilege for Out-of-Town Buses Opposed.

Opposition to a proposed amendment of the District license law which would exempt out-of-town sight-seeing buses from license fees, was voiced yesterday by the District Commissioners in a report sent to the Senate and House District Committees.

The fees are charged buses which are operated regularly within the District, and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen pointed out that foreign bus concerns are now permitted to operate here for 72 hours without securing a local license. Local companies, he said, have objected to the privileges given to out-of-town buses to remain here for several days doing local sight-seeing business.

Maniac Slays 2, Defies Officers to Take Him

Denver, Feb. 9 (AP).—Denver police tonight dispatched riot squads to an isolated farmhouse 8 miles north of Byers, Colo., at request of Sheriff Lee Templeton of Adams County, who said an unidentified maniac had slain two persons and barricaded himself in the house.

The man told officers he would never be taken alive, Templeton telephoned William J. Armstrong, detective captain.

Fatal Parisian Street Rioting Flares Anew

Two Churches Set Afire as Communists Renew Fight.

Seven persons were hurt in the first clash. While officers' ranks were being reinforced the crowd also gained new members, until it was estimated to number 10,000, and surged through the Belleville and Menilmontant sections.

At least 1,500 manifestants started marching toward the Place de la Republique along the Boulevard du Temple, where police up to that point had managed to keep the crowd scattered.

Mob Adopts Sortie.

A police sergeant was brought to a hotel first-aid station with a serious bullet wound in his head.

The demonstration, which was intended as a prelude to a general strike Monday against Fascism, turned into running gun battles.

Communists surged into the Apache quarter from workers' neighborhoods along the East Side of Paris. They chanted the International as they ran and fought.

Police said the Communists opened fire when officers tried to disperse them. The rioters broke up into bands of 50 and ran into narrow and dark side streets, reappearing later for sudden attacks.

The 71-year-old Doumergue at his first cabinet meeting took precautions to protect the quarter, but decided to keep the troops in reserve unless the rioting got out of hand.

Fallen Police Assaulted.

Pistol shots greeted every squad of police reinforcements, and many police fell under the hail of bullets or were set upon and furiously kicked.

Windows in police stations were smashed.

Meanwhile, Doumergue welded a group of political enemies today into a cabinet of seasoned statesmen pledged to restore order in riot-torn Paris.

After presenting his 19 ministers to President Albert Lebrun, the new premier faced the immediate tasks of coping with threats of a nation-wide "anti-Fascist" general strike Monday.

Included in Doumergue's government on a basis of equality as "elder statesmen" are the political arch enemies, Edouard Herriot and Andre Tardieu, both former premiers, who were named ministers of state without portfolios.

Four Outside Parliament.

That four in the cabinet are not members of Parliament—an unusual development in French politics—testified to Doumergue's desire for a representative government that would forget politics in the struggle with labor troubles, economic ills, an unbalanced budget, and charges of corruption that grew out of the $40,000,000 Bayonne Pawnshop bond scandal and gave rise to the anti-government demonstrations.

The 71-year-old Doumergue, who left the peace of his southern country home to enter again the political arena, himself sounded the rallying call to his appointees at a meeting in the foreign office.

"From the Premier to the last of the Ministers," he declared, "everyone will do his duty!"

Only the Communists and Socialists headed by Deputy Leon Blum were omitted from the roster. In complexion the cabinet is advanced liberal or slightly leftist.

The French Federation of Labor has called upon its members and affiliates in electric, railroad, postal, gas, water, and other service branches to stop work Monday in protest against the government's handling of the riots and "Fascism."

Teachers Also May Strike.

Representatives of 800,000 civil servants and school teachers announced they, too, would strike against pay cuts.

Doumergue achieved some measure of success when he exacted a promise from the Labor Federation that Monday's strike would be peaceful.

The venerated premier brought to the council table a wide representation. The Socialists' party principle forbade participation in the government.

Doumergue was encouraged by a message from former President Raymond Poincare, who said:

"I congratulate you heartily for accepting the post you alone can fill; my affectionate good wishes."

His cabinet includes:

Premier, Gaston Doumergue; ministers of state, Tardieu and Herriot; foreign affairs, Louis Barthou; war, Marshal Henri Petain; navy, Francois Pietri; air, Gen. Victor Dehain; commerce, Lucien Lamoureux; communications, Andre Mallarme; interior, Albert Sarraut; finance, Germain Martin; justice, Henry Cheron; health and hygiene, Louis Marin; education, Aime Berthod; colonies, Pierre Laval; public works, Etienne Flandin; labor, Andrien Marquet; agriculture, Henri Queuille; pensions, Andre Rivollet; merchant marine, William Bertrand.

Herriot Quits Party Post.

Herriot resigned as president of the Radical Socialist party to enter the government. Marquet represents the Neo-Socialists.

The cabinet promptly took over its functions, after calling on the president. Doumergue installed himself in the foreign office as the successor of Edouard Daladier, whose ministry resigned under fire.

Eugene Frot, Daladier's interior minister, whom several public bodies blamed for the firing during the riots, left by airplane, his destination, he said, being Morocco.

The robes Frot wore as a lawyer were burned publicly today at the Palace of Justice by his colleagues, and disbarment proceedings were started.

Doumergue's ministers began drafting a declaration for presentation to Parliament February 15.

The group of 20 men, with 17 portfolios, is the smallest cabinet France has had in many years.

Three men, the premier, Herriot and Tardieu, are without portfolios. The latter two are vice premiers, so named to placate Herriot and his Radical Socialists, who insisted he and Tardieu, a Center Republican, have equally important posts.

Truce Proclaimed.

Doumergue issued a proclamation posted throughout Paris which read:

"Citizens: I have been called to form a government of truce, appeasement, and justice.

"This government is formed.

"In its name I ask you to accomplish in your turn your duty in renouncing all agitation and placing the interest of France and the Republic above all else.

"President of the council, Gaston Doumergue."

The new cabinet contains four senators—Barthou, Sarraut, Cheron, and Laval—two soldiers, Petain and Denain, and two other nonmembers of Parliament, Doumergue and Rivollet. The others are deputies.

There are six former premiers, Doumergue, Barthou, Sarraut, Laval, Herriot, and Tardieu; and four who have never been ministers—Petain, Denain, Marquet, and Rivollet.

This ministry is the ninety-sixth in the history of the 64-year-old Third Republic, and the seventh during the period of the present legislature. The others have existed an average of three months each.

Former Premier Camille Chautemps was elected president of the Radical Socialist group in Parliament to succeed M. Herriot.

When Tardieu was informed of his appointment and that of Herriot as vice premiers, he laughingly said, "Herriot and I are going to shut ourselves up in a cafe and play cards."

"Heavy Water" Finder Wins Science Medal

Chemistry Society Praises "Great Achievement" of Prof. Urey.

Prof. Harold C. Urey, of Columbia University, has been awarded the Willard Gibbs Medal of the Chicago section of the American Chemical Society for his discovery of "heavy water," it was announced here yesterday.

Describing the feat of Prof. Urey as promising to "rank among the great achievements of science," the offices of the American Chemical Society here said the Columbia professor, who is 41, is the youngest man ever to receive the honor.

"No scientific accomplishment of the present day," said the chemical society announcement, "has had so immediate and widespread an influence on research programs."

Heavy water looks like and has the same chemical composition as ordinary water, said the society. Each molecule has two atoms of hydrogen to one of oxygen, but the hydrogen in heavy water weighs twice as much as that in rain water.

Although no conclusive tests have been made, the society said preliminary experiments indicate heavy water is not poisonous, although certain types of marine animals have died after drinking it.

15 Below and 30 Inches of Snow In 1898 Still Old Timers' Topic

Street, Rail and Waterway Traffic Paralyzed as Result.

Old timers who contend our winters are getting milder still have a case.

But they'll have to go as far back as the winter of 1898—the year of the big blizzard—to prove it. On February 11 of that year the mercury fell to 15 below and the average temperature for several days following was 3 under zero.

And snow? Contemporary newspaper accounts vary the amount between 30 and 40 inches. Communication was paralyzed. All railroads ceased operation. Drifts 5 and 6 feet high made streets impassable. Six inchees of ice locked bay steamers in the Potomac River for several weeks.

For the city's poor the winter was a nightmare. Coal and food were rationed in small lots to those who had money to pay for them. The Washington Post raised a fund for those who did not.

Many were found half dead in snowdrifts. Several died of hunger and exposure.

The next winter to which hardier, warm-blooded generations point with pride was 1912. It got as cold as 13 below on January 15. But the Capital's newspapers printed a more cheerful winter picture. The following is quoted from The Post of that day:

"Enthusiastic over the ideal skating conditions existing here for the past few days, a number of lovers of the sport, who have been making daily visits to the Tidal Basin recently, gathered there yesterday and made arrangements for a public carnival."

Several days later 15,000 watched 3,000 skate on the basin to the music of the Marine Band and by the light of hundreds of Japanese lanterns.

"The NEW DEALERS"

CLAUDE SWANSON

"Not the worst of The New Deal appointments, for Roosevelt knew that Swanson would cooperate and that he knows the Navy thoroughly."

. . . from Chapter 9, "Sops to Cerberus."

HENRY WALLACE

"There are more brains and real ability per pound of human flesh in the agricultural wing of The New Deal than anywhere else."

. . . from Chapter 3, "Frenzied Farming."

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

"He is essentially the product of four very important factors: a good family, a good digestion, a good education and a bad illness. He has sense enough to trust the people. He likes them."

. . . from Chapter 1, "Chief Croupier."

WILLIAM WOODIN

"He was invented by Sir James M. Barrie and set to music by Ethelbert Nevin, and he made history."

. . . from Chapter 9, "Sops to Cerberus."

JOHN GARNER

"He is living proof of the political axiom that you can travel a long way if only you stand still long enough. He has made an alert and efficient presiding officer for the Senate . . . speeding The New Deal legislation."

. . . from Chapter 9, "Sops to Cerberus."

HARRY HOPKINS

"He has offended a lot of politicians and the Tory group is out for his scalp. He is as close to The White House as any of them, for he is one of 'F. D. R.'s Men.'"

. . . from Chapter 6, "Utopia on Tap."

HAROLD ICKES

"He came into The New Deal by the long, long trail of reform politics. His chief fault is that he is too suspicious."

. . . from Chapter 6, "Utopia on Tap."

CORDELL HULL

"A low tariff enthusiast in an era of high tariffs, a Jacksonian States Rights man in an era of Federal aggrandizement, and a convinced dry in a wet country."

. . . from Chapter 9, "Sops to Cerberus."

GEORGE DERN

"His mental workings are as slow as the Senate, he is as naive as a bond salesman, but he is intelligent and he has a distinctive understanding of the American experiment."

. . . from Chapter 9, "Sops to Cerberus."

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

"She is the most natural and energetic person, man or woman, who has lived in The White House in generations. She is, by herself, a great deal of The New Deal."

. . . from Chapter 7, "The Praetorian Guard."

LEWIS DOUGLAS

"The survival of Lew Douglas and a few others of the 'go-along' school of practical financial politics, illustrates the value to the Administration of keeping an effective and critical opposition alive in its own ranks."

. . . from Chapter 5, "Gold Is Silent."

JAMES FARLEY

"Make no mistake! Farley now has big political ambitions and his next move will be toward the Governorship of New York . . . probably in 1936, when Roosevelt runs again. His calculations are transparent."

. . . from Chapter 8, "The Black Chamber."

HENRY MORGENTHAU, JR.

"In six weeks, he gave the Treasury the most severe series of executive shocks it has had in a generation. No one has accused him of incubating economic ideas of any sort."

. . . from Chapter 4, "Mad Money."

FRANCES PERKINS

"She got the job because she was good at it, not because she was a woman. For the first time, the Secretary of Labor is not a mere union leader, but a wide-awake representative of the interests of all workers."

. . . from Chapter 2, "The Industrial Ogpu."

THE quotations above are from various chapters in a book which, in a few weeks, people will be buying, reading and talking about everywhere . . . from coast to coast . . . "THE NEW DEALERS."

But, before publication, "THE NEW DEALERS" will run serially . . . and EXCLUSIVELY . . . in The Washington Post. It begins Sunday, February 11 and continues, daily and Sunday, through Tuesday, March 13. Thirty-one big installments . . . and you will not want to miss a single one!

"It is about time that someone looked back of the measures for the men who make them. This book attempts to tell who's who and why in this last round-up of American Democracy.

"I have set down, as fairly as I can, the chief facts about fifty-odd important personalities of The New Deal: how they got into it, how they got that way in the first place, and what they have done about it, how they get along with each other, what they're like as human beings.

"In other words, I have tried to give the low-down on the up-and-ups in this wild political free-for-all at Washington."

. . from the author's introduction to "THE NEW DEALERS."

The author of "THE NEW DEALERS" prefers to remain a mystery. But the facts on some fifty important New Deal personalities will be no mystery to readers of The Washington Post between February 11 and March 13.

Although this series of articles is not to be regarded as reflecting the editorial opinion of The Washington Post, we have no hesitancy in asserting that no more vividly interesting and entertainingly presented material has yet been written concerning the leading men and women back of The New Deal.

Virginian Raps Doctors' Vote On Sanatorium

Two on State Board Feared De Jarnette Competition, Asserts Moffett.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Feb. 9.—Physicians were charged with unfair criticism of the DeJarnette Sanatorium today by Delegate W. Stuart Moffett, of Staunton, where the institution is located.

Mr. Moffett, a Democratic leader in the Assembly, announced he would seek revival of a bill by Senator T. Russell Cather, Winchester, under which continued operation of the sanatorium would be necessary.

Mr. Cather recently permitted a Senate committee to indefinitely defer action on his measure. The proposal would have renewed legislative approval for the institution's practice of accepting only those insane patients able to pay the cost of their treatment.

Mr. Moffett criticized the State General Hospital Board for recently voting 6 to 2 in favor of closing the sanatorium March 1.

"Two members of this general board," he contended, "are operators of private institutions and don't want the competition. Other members have been misguided by false claims of some doctors that Dr. J. S. DeJarnette, the superintendent, is making a profit from a State institution.

"This institution fills a crying need. Many people needing mental treatment are able to pay the actual cost when they couldn't pay to enter a private institution. They don't want to be charity patients."

Answers Physicians.

Arguments that the sanatorium competed with private institutions were met by Moffett with the comment that the State penitentiary sold products produced with convict labor in competition with private industry.

"Dr. DeJarnette," Mr. Moffett added, "has cured many people after they spent most of their money in private hospitals and failed to get well."

Building at Asylum Is Called Fire Trap

Richmond, Feb. 9 (AP).—Senator Robert Gilliam, of Petersburg, tonight said the Taylor Building at the Eastern State Hospital at Williamsburg was a fire trap.

The Senator, who is chairman of the special legislative committee investigating charges of "intolerable" conditions at the hospitals for the insane, went with the committee on a five-hour inspection of the Williamsburg institution today.

Senator T. Russell Cather, of Winchester, asserted meanwhile that he desired more light on the closing of the Dejarnette Sanatorium at Staunton, a pay institution in which the State has an investment. He said he might ask for discharge of the Senate Public Institutions Committee, which last night killed his bill to legalize the Dejarnette institution as a pay institution.

Week's Exposition of United Food Stores, Inc., Will Begin Tonight at Washington Auditorium

Baby Contest Again Will Feature Annual Exhibits Here.

Full Model Store Set Up Inside Building; Many Prizes Listed.

The third annual food exposition of United Food Stores, Inc., will open in the Washington Auditorium tonight at 7:30, coming as a distinct contribution to the Capital's calendar of show activities.

Culminating months of preparation, the officers and directors of the organization of 130 cooperative grocery establishments in Washington trading area, have planned an interesting and diversified array of exhibits and prizes for the show, which will continue through next Saturday, February 17.

Virtually every branch of the food-producing field, as well as allied industries, will be represented. Through the members of the United Food Stores chain, thousands of tickets have been distributed. As an added attraction, members of the store chain, as well as exhibitors, have agreed to distribute hundreds of baskets of food. Free samples also will be given all visitors.

An outstanding feature of the show will be the model store, complete in every detail, which will occupy a prominent place in the exposition. Its huge plate glass windows will be dressed up the same as store display windows, and inside shelves and counters will be exactly the same as in any one of the many United Food Stores.

Symbolizing the delivery service, which is one of United's features, will be a gleaming new delivery truck, with the monogram of the organization on it, which will stand on the display floor.

Babies to Compete.

The program of contests and entertainment will start tomorrow night and continue throughout the period of the show. For the opening night, the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind will feature its band, composed of ten blind musicians. The institute is sponsoring an exhibit at the show.

A feature which proved to be an outstanding attraction at the 1933 show will get under way Monday. It is the baby contest, and 300 mothers who entered their children last year have been invited to do so again this year.

The first day, the contest will be open to infants up to 6 months old. Tuesday, it will be for babies between 6 months and 1 year; Wednesday, from 1 to 2 years; Thursday, from 2 to 3 years, and Friday, from 3 to 4 years. On Saturday, the closing day, the champion baby of the week will be selected from the daily winners. Prizes will be awarded each winner.

The afternoon sessions on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday will be featured by a cooking school, conducted by the Home Service Institute. It will be in session beginning at 2 o'clock on each of those four days, and all Washington housewives are invited to attend and hear expert instructions.

Unusual Contests Offered.

Monday night, the tallest show visitor will be entitled to a prize. Additional prizes each night will include electric refrigerators, radios, washing machines, vacuum cleaners and a 1934 Ford automobile.

Tuesday night a prize will be given the couple who have been married the longest. They must bring their marriage license or other evidence. Wednesday night the contest prize will be given to the largest family present. Thursday evening, prizes will be given for the twins most alike and the twins least alike.

On Friday, the special contest event of the evening programs will take place—the whistling competition, in which many experts are expected to take part.

The closing night's program will be featured by a Mardi Gras carnival and award of the Ford automobile.

Charter Changes In Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Two changes are being written into the Charlottesville charter.

One would prevent the sinking fund commission from purchasing securities not "designated and approved for investment of fiduciary funds" by the State of Virginia.

The second would place the matter of adoption or refusal of a bond issue directly in the hands of voters paying taxes upon property assessed at $250 or more. The voting of a municipal issue then would depend upon the agreement of not only a majority of the entire electorate but also upon the assent of a majority of those owning real or personal property.

Culpeper Starts Work on CWA Airport Soon

Frederick County Office Expenses Total Only $65.

Culpeper, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—The Town Council and the County Board Board of Supervisors yesterday agreed to share 50-50 in financing an airport on the farm of A. R. Partlow, 2 miles west of here.

Grading will begin in a few days as a CWA project. The U. S. Army proposed the airport here and approved the site. The airport will meet Government requirements for daylight flying, and will provide another field between Charlottesville and Washington.

Office Expenses Only $65.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Total office expenses for the Civil Works Administration in Winchester City and Frederick County since December 1 are $65.07, Walter M. Shade, manager of the reemployment bureau, told Lions Club here. Office space was donated for all CWA officials.

Frank W. Bailey, Winchester CWA administrator, has spent $10 85 for office supplies; W. Earle Edwards, Frederick County administrator, has paid $28.97 for office supplies and telephone service, and Mrs. Shade's expenses for office supplies and telpehones have been $25.25.

School Bids Too High.

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Erection of a new public school building with a PWA loan in Woodstock has been postponed indefinitely by the Shenandoah County School Board following receipt of bids more than $15,000 in excess of the figure allowed by the Board of Supervisors.

Six bids were received. The Taylor Manufacturing Co., of Farmville, Va., was the lowest bidder, with $63,773, but the appropriation of the supervisors was but $48,000.

It was understood here today that the School Board and other advocates of the building probably will request the Board of Supervisors to raise their allotment to $60,000, on the basis of obtaining $20,000 from the PWA and $40,000 from the literary fund.

Project Approved.

Middletown, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—W. Erle Edwards, CWA administrator for Frederick County, has been advised of the approval of improvements in the sanitation and grading of the grounds at the Middletown High School. The work will involve an expenditure of $3,115.29, specifying 4,590 manhours and giving employment to between 30 and 35 men.

Applications to Be Considered.

King George Courthouse, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Applications for funds for relief work in the county will be considered in the parish house at 10 a. m. tomorrow at a meeting which will be addressed by Miss Gene Smith, field supervisor for the State Emergency Relief Administration.

Virginia Deputy CWA Chiefs Donate Work to Aid Recovery

W. F. Day, of Staunton, Complimented Highly on Service.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—During the World War it was the "dollar a year man" who received a good deal of commendation for services rendered.

During the "war on depression," being waged from many angles by Federal, State, county and municipal governments there are men who are giving whole-heartedly of their ability and time—and not even receiving the traditional "dollar a year."

Take, for instance, the district deputy State Civil Works administrators. There are eight of them in Virginia, including Willard F. Day, of this city.

He was appointed to the office by Gov. John Garland Pollard about November 15, and since then has given supervision to the spending of more than a quarter of a million dollars in the fifth district and has had on his pay roll as many as 4,990 workers a week.

City Manager Since 1923.

Mr. Day has been Staunton's city manager since 1923, and is also president of the International City Managers' Association, having been elevated to this office at the association's annual conference in Chicago last October. Just recently he was named chairman of the utility rate committee of the League of Virginia Municipalities, which will hold its annual convention in Staunton next fall.

A native of Baltimore, Mr. Day, before accepting the managership of Staunton, was an assistant engineer with the Maryland road commission, later a resident engineer for the Virginia highway department, resigning to become Campbell County's engineer in charge of road construction and maintenance. Just preceding his selection as Staunton's city manager, he was with the asphalt department of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Staunton's $800,000 water extension project is the biggest municipal undertaking launched and accomplished since he came to his present post. Remodeling of the city-owned opera house into a modern municipal building is another of the major items during his administration, while a progressive program of street improvement also is to his credit.

Complimented on Work.

As deputy CWA administrator in the Fifth Virginia District, which embraces seven counties and four cities in the Shenandoah valley, Mr. Day works under the State administrator, William A. Smith, of Richmond, and Harry L. Hopkins, of Washington, National CWA chief.

Included in the CWA set-up are the county or city Civil Works committees, in this district composed of a member of the city council or board of supervisors, a member of the school board, a member of the reemployment committee, a member of the board of public welfare, or whatever relief agency is outstanding in the particular community, and a member of the public works committee.

The various unit offices are filled by Mr. Day upon recommenadations of the local CWA committees. "So far as I know not a single appointment has been made on a political basis, and no person has been employed who was not recommended as having the proper qualifications."

State Director Smith and Gov. Pollard, before the latter retired from office, have complimented Mr. Day highly on the manner in which he has handled the CWA work in this district.

Grocery Thief Sentenced.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.). Seeking more time for hearing Shenandoah National Park land cases, Judge Philip Williams, Winchester, has continued criminal cases in Frederick County Circuit Court until the April term.

Only two cases have been tried. Jennings Hottle pleaded guilty of stealing eggs and groceries from the stores of J. Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.). Hurtle Hensley, 29, was found guilty of assault and battery and given the maximum punishment of 12 months in jail and a fine of $500 today in Rockingham Circuit Court.

Layton Hensley was convicted of felonious assault at the December term and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for the same fight. He is now on bond pending an appeal.

Assembly Gets 2% Sales Tax Bill on Monday

Districting Paper Loses in Senate; Liquor Shifts Attacked.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 9.—Threats of sales tax legislation by powerful colleagues today gave members of the General Assembly disturbing material to reflect upon over the week-end.

Meanwhile, the House rejected the Holt Congressional redistricting bill and the Senate received a favorable report on a State dispensary liquor measure. First skirmishes in Senate whisky control war will come next week.

Observers believed talk of a sales tax—strenuously opposed in many sections of the State—was revived as a maneuver to draw support for the revised financial program of Gov. Peery, calling for some $800,000 in additional taxes as a means of assuring an eight-month minimum school term.

Bill Promised.

Nevertheless, Delegate G. A. Massenberg, Hampton, failed to qualify an announcement on the House floor that he would introduce Monday a bill for a 2 per cent general sales tax.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, House finance chairman, reiterated his opposition to a sales tax, but conceded such legislation might prove necessary.

Gov. Peery and Hall joined in an attack on a Senate committee liquor amendment contemplating reduction of the beer tax from $2.75 to $1 a barrel and from 1 to half a cent a bottle. They discredited reports that the lower tax would bring back the nickel glass of brew.

Senator Aubrey Weaver, Front Royal, champion of the low tax, announced he would insist on Assembly approval.

Emergency Clause Fatal.

An emergency clause to make the bill effective on passage proved the downfall of the redistricting measure when proponents failed to gain the necessary four-fifths majority. The vote was 73 to 20 in favor of passage. The conflict probably will be renewed Monday with a motion to reconsider. All proposed amendments were defeated. One would have shifted Goochland County from the old Eighth back to the Third.

A resolution demanding a 50 per cent reduction in Federal tobacco taxes was advanced by Delegate John W. Morrison, Harrisonburg.

Commission Continues Utility Investigation

Richmond, Feb 9 (AP).—Awaiting action by the General Assembly on possible tax increases for utility companies, the State Corporation Commission has continued its informal hearing on the operations and rates of the Virginia Public Service Co. until March 15.

The request for a continuance was made by the company.

Meanwhile, Jack G. Holtzclaw, president of the Virginia Electric & Power Co., said action by the General Assembly would determine the course to be followed by his company. The corporation commission has cut the rates of this company's gas and power divisions.

Fire Chief Urges More Equipment

New Alarm System Sought for Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Chief W. M. Mullins, of the Roanoke Fire Department is urging extension of pipe lines and installation of additional fire hydrants, especially in outlying residential districts.

The chief also has called council's attention to "a growing need for a modern fire alarm system to replace the equipment which was installed in 1907, in order to care for additional circuits needed for installation of more alarms." He also recommends appointment of additional men in order that the two-platoon system may be inaugurated, and installation of fire alarm boxes in all schools.

Mullin's recommendations accompanied his annual report showing that Roanoke's fire loss in 1933 was $219,200.52, an increase of $77,383.53 over 1932.

Some Haul!

Charge Denied By Red Cross

Fredericksburg Chairman Answers Attack by Mayor.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.). "We have no apologies to make to any one concerning activities in this branch of the Red Cross," Wistar W. Braxton, chairman, declared yesterday in reply to criticism of the Fredericksburg Chapter by Mayor R. J. Payne before city council.

Mayor Payne had charged the chapter with "jealously guarding a cash balance in the bank while local people are daily suffering from cold and hunger" and stated that the city responded with $667 last fall in answer to the Red Cross drive for $600.

Mayor Payne also quoted Judge John Barton Payne, National chairman of the Red Cross, as feeling there is need for improvement here. Mr. Braxton today revealed a telegram in which Judge Payne denied having made such a quotation and promised to send a Red Cross field worker to "look the situation over and confer fully with you."

Mr. Braxton pointed to the published report of Red Cross activities here last year, showing a total of $476.44 to have been expended here for relief and other purposes. J. Conway Chichester, treasurer of the chapter, said the organization had accumulated from $700 to $800 in small annual savings which it is holding for emergencies, and added "we have never turned down a single worthy case brought to our attention."

Bill to Slash Virginia Beer Tax Is Assailed

Gov. Peery Voices Strong Opposition; Senate Pushes Measures.

Richmond, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Senate, working on its calendar while the House was engaged in a running debate, today passed several bills, including the McMurran House bill, reducing from three to two years the period when desertion shall become ground for divorce in Virginia.

Heavy fire was directed today in verbal attacks on the Senate Finance Committee's amendment to the liquor control bill to cut the excise tax on beer of more than 3.2 per cent alcohol from $2.75 to $1 per barrel, and from 1 cent to a half-cent per bottle.

Gov. Peery was among those protesting the move. In a statement from the executive offices he said the amendment ment more than a 50 per cent cut in beer revenue.

Monday night the finance committees of the two houses will hold public hearings on the tax program offered by the Governor to raise $1,000,000 for public schools. The Governor reduced the amount requested last week to $875,000.

Frank Moore, of Rockbrige, chairman of the House insurance and banking committee, announced a public hearing for 2:30 p. m. Tuesday on the bill permitting localities to levy a tax on insurance premiums for the benefit of a firemen's relief fund, and the bill requiring fire insurance companies to pay the full amount of a policy in event of total loss.

On the House calendar next week will be the Moffett bill reported as a new section relative to introduction of evidence in mitigation of damages in suits for defamation, and the Hobson bill, providing for a trial justice in every county.

Among bills passed by the Senate was the uniform machine gun regulatory law recommended by the Federal Government, the House bill setting up a new form of police commission in Norfolk County, and the House bill permitting counties to release tax penalties and interest if the taxes are paid within 120 days of the passage of the act.

Another bill authorized the highway commission to take into the highway system a road from Jarman's Gap to the North Carolina or the Tennessee line.

Delegate John W. Morrison, of Harrisonburg, introduced his resolution memorializing Congress to reduce by 50 per cent the internal revenue tax on tobacco.

Delegates Morgan, Duval and Barrow introduced a bill to enlarge the ability of the State banking department to examine banks and loan companies.

Rail Group Cites Heavy Tax Load

Low Percentage Charged to Buses Pointed Out.

Richmond, Feb. 9 (AP).—Approximately 20 per cent of all local school costs in 84 Virginia counties are paid out of taxes on steam railroads, with one county obtaining as much as 47.7 per cent of its school funds from such a source, it was asserted today in a compilation of official figures prepared by E. E. Cone, secretary of the Virginia Railway Association.

Mr. Cone said that these figures are especially significant since the railroads' greatest competitors, the commercial trucks and buses, are paying a "negligible" sum to the counties and contribute nothing to the general expenses of State government.

Five New CWA Jobs Approved At Frederick

Two Bridge Projects Also Are Under Consideration.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 9 (Spl.). Five new Civil Works Administration projects, including street and gutter work, were approved by Mayor Elmer F. Munshower and the board of aldermen yesterday and will be started as soon as final approval is given by CWA officials.

Two more projects for the construction of new steel bridges over Carroll Creek within the city limits are under consideration.

Mayor Munshower rejected proposed establishment here of a home for transients. "I am absolutely not in accord with the methods of handling the transients here or throughout the country," he said. "Instead of making it convenient for transients to wander into the city it should be made just as inconvenient as possible."

CWA road work is in progress from Thurmont west toward Foxville and from the Catoctin Manor into the mountain, a distance of 9 miles. Shorter stretches of road work also are in progress from Burkettsville to Cramptons Gap and from Urbana toward Thurston. A road project before Thomas M. Linthicum, district engineer in charge of CWA highway construction is a three-quarter-mile stretch from Keysville toward the birthplace of Francis Scitt Key. A delegation from Carroll County headed by P. B. Englar, Taneytown, held a conference here with Mr. Linthicum on the projects. No other Carroll County projects include building a stretch of road from Eldersburg toward Gist, 1 mile from Barrett south and half a mile from Emmitsburg to the Pennsylvania State line. A delegation of farmers appeared before the county commissioners at the courthouse and requested the building of 2½ miles of new road from Myersville to Camada Hill as a CWA project.

JUSTICE to the war wounded . . . JUSTICE to the war dead . . . JUSTICE to the American people

Thousands of War Veterans Challenge

THE JUSTICE TO THE WAR WOUNDED, THE JUSTICE TO THE WAR DEAD, AND THE JUSTICE TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AS REPRESENTED BY THE SO-CALLED 4-POINT PROGRAM OF THE AMERICAN LEGION.

Here are the FACTS

The legislative program of the Legion sounds fair enough to the casual reader. Actually it proposes laws which would wipe out the reforms of the Economy Act and open the gates to vast new abuses.

This proposed legislation is now being sponsored by a number of our legislators in both the Senate and House.

Pension legislation is a complicated subject and the public rarely knows what is going on till it has to pay the bill.

The purpose of this page is to explain the situation and give the facts.

THE VETERANS LOBBY

This powerful lobby is now working in Washington in the same quiet, effective manner that it worked after the Civil War and after the Spanish War. Its avowed purpose is to secure just compensation for those disabled in war and for the dependents of those who died in war service. Under cover of this high purpose, with which no right-thinking citizen can disagree, the lobby works steadily, as always, for new pensions for great numbers of veterans who came out of the war uninjured, and for their dependents. Congressmen respond because legislation giving new pensions brings votes. There is no political advantage in securing increased pensions for the little group of veterans who were really disabled in the war—or for the small number of widows of those killed.

Dead men cast no votes.

HOW THE AMERICAN LEGION BACKS UP THE LOBBY

The American Legion was founded as an association with patriotic aims. The vast majority of its members still are patriotic. But the policies of the Legion are determined by a small unrepresentative group. At its last National Convention the American Legion directly opposed the requests of President Roosevelt and declared for policies which we hold are unjust, undemocratic.

The wording of these policies is so vague and ambiguous that many legionnaires themselves do not understand their actual purpose.

Veterans who subscribe to just principles should face the fact that the American Legion has been overzealous in the promotion of benefit for all ex-soldiers rather than for those suffering actual service disabilities.

WHAT THE 4-POINT PROGRAM REALLY DOES

Point 1 would restore pensions to certain actual war disabled veterans reduced by the present simplification of rating and with this we are in full agreement. At the same time by failing to confine "line of duty" to actual war service it would restore the 15 per cent cut in retirement pay to emergency officers, a pension that should never have been allowed.

Point 2 flatly opposes the President's plans and provides that men suffering from non-service connected illness should get Government care.

Point 3 is a nullification of the decisions of the President's Reviewing Boards and would re-establish the erroneous belief that all awards of presumptive service connection were properly made.

Point 4 does not restrict pensions to widows and dependents of veterans who died in war service, or as a direct result of such service. This would open the door for tremendous annual payments and the continuance of a ridiculous situation, under which we are still paying seven "widows" of a war which occurred 122 years ago.

As chapters of a U. S. Veterans Organization we resent the attempt of some legislators to make the veteran laws a party policy and will uphold representatives in their support of President Roosevelt in his efforts to restrict benefits to veterans actually disabled in war service.

What is a War Widow?

The public thinks of a war widow as the wife of a man who died in the war. There are very few of these real war widows.

The lobbyists call the wife of any former soldier who dies, a war widow. There are hundreds and thousands of these and there will be millions more. Seven "war widows" are still receiving pensions from the War of 1812. They married aged veterans when they were young girls.

It is proposed that certain World War pensions be placed on the same basis as Spanish War Pensions.

The records show the following statistics for the Spanish War:

Total enlistment	392,000
Total casualties	15,921
Number on pension rolls
in 1920	23,144
in 1933	196,043
now	126,219

It is quite obvious that it would be a serious error and a grave injustice to the American people to place the 4,000,000 World War Veterans and their dependents on the same pension basis as the Spanish War Veterans.

ANOTHER INNOCENT SOUNDING SUGGESTION

The American Legion went on record at its last National Convention in favor of the waiving of all interest on loans made by the Government to holders of bonus certificates.

Such a waiving of interest would be equivalent to the immediate cashing of half the face value of the bonus certificate, with an additional cost to the Government of over one billion dollars more than the cost of the bonus as originally passed by Congress. Is there any reason for it?

THE PRESIDENT MUST BE SUPPORTED

Recent statements by Senators and Congressmen on the subject of veteran legislation are convincing evidence of the failure of these legislators to appreciate the temper of the American public on this question.

If the American public is faced with a choice between the principles enunciated by the Legion 4-point program and those of President Roosevelt, as stated before the Legion's convention in Chicago, there can be no doubt as to what that choice may be.

WHO CAN THWART THE LOBBY

As Roger Burlingame says, "But no President can be expected to do this alone. It must be the people in the end (led, I hope, by right-thinking veterans) who will change and reform pension legislation. It can be done." War veterans themselves should lead the fight to defeat the veterans' lobby. The veterans groups whose names are signed to this advertisement are only a scattered few of the many thousands who are springing up in every State of the Union to repudiate the so-called leaders of the "Veterans' bloc." Every veteran who believes in just principles should join us in upholding President Roosevelt.

The chapters and members of this Association who have written this advertisement have paid for it out of their own pockets. They believe that this will clarify discussions of the subject on the eve of their National Convention, now assembling in Washington.

In The Scale Of Fish.

When Gertrude Stein published her colorful autobiography, at least some of her readers hoped that she would henceforth abandon dadaism, or whatever it is, and clothe her elusive thoughts in comprehensible language. It is evident that such hopes are to be dashed. The opening verse of the libretto written by Miss Stein for the opera, "Three Saints in Four Acts," just produced in Hartford, follows:

To know to know to love her so,
Four saints prepare for saints.
It makes well fish.
Four saints it makes well fish.
Four saints prepare for saints it makes it well well fish it makes it well fish prepare for saints.

Of course this may sound quite like English if it ever comes to be warbled in Przemysl or Tsitishar. But for domestic purposes it provides little comfort to those who have longed for the day when the words, as well as the music, of opera would be at least vaguely enlightening.

In The Middle Of The Road.

Although France did not get a cabinet of new faces, which some shouting rioters had demanded, Gaston Doumergue has given her a strong "salvation ministry." It is more conservative in its center of balance than the preceding cabinets, but not so far to the Right as some had expected. Herriot offsets Tardieu in the new position of vice premier, the two, with the premier, forming a nonpartisan triumvirate of wide popular appeal.

The selection of Louis Barthou as minister of foreign affairs is perhaps the most significant of all the appointments. It indicates that Doumergue will stress domestic affairs for the time being and that he will make no new ventures in the foreign field. Barthou is of the "pre-war" group of elder statesmen, which included Poincare, Viviani, Briand and Millerand. He was the second premier of the Poincare presidency, which began in 1913.

Barthou began his career as a Radical deputy but eased more and more toward the Center. In recent years, as a senator, he has been on the outskirts of the political picture, content to attend sessions at the Luxembourg, to collect rare books, write literary articles, and otherwise follow scholarly pursuits. In his attitude toward foreign affairs he is neither an intransigeant nationalist, like Tardieu, nor a liberal internationalist of the Herriot stripe. The selection of either of these for the foreign portfolio would have had repercussions; Doumergue compromised neatly and took Barthou, whose attitude toward Germany is not hostile, not friendly, but merely skeptical.

The inclusion of Louis Marin is not only a gesture to the extreme right, but is also Doumergue's assurance that he intends to have a most vigorous parliamentary investigation of the Stavisky scandal. Marin is known in France as "The Honest Madman," so quixotic is his sense of rectitude. He headed the parliamentary commission which made such an excellent job of investigating the Oustric scandal.

Young Adrian Marquet, the new minister of Labor, is a man to watch. Relatively young, he broke recently with Leon Blum because he contended that the Socialist leader, with a policy of abstention from participation in government, was too academic and that what Socialism needed was a definite, active policy. He is regarded as a "strong man" and in the anxious days recently his name was whispered as the dictator of the future. This is his first venture in a ministry.

The composition of the cabinet is such that it unites virtually all political elements in the country, except the Socialists, Communists and Royalists, who are unrepresented in the Chamber. With this backing, Doumergue will endeavor to bring stability now that the recent thunderstorm has somewhat cleared the political air of France.

Richmond B. Keech.

Reports that President Roosevelt is considering Richmond B. Keech for reappointment as people's counsel of the Public Utilities Commission will meet with strong local approval. In his present office, and in his previous position as assistant corporation counsel, Mr. Keech has manifested a broad understanding of the public welfare and a large capacity for making himself useful. Because of his excellent record he is understood to have the indorsement of several prominent officials for another term.

Mr. Keech was instrumental in bringing about modification of the consent decree under which power rates were regulated in the District. The new sliding scale which was adopted largely as a result of his efforts is said to have saved the public $1,000,000.

Likewise Mr. Keech deserves a great deal of credit for the measure of stability developed in the taxicab business. He opposed a return to the meter system in the belief that more favorable rates might evolve from the zoning arrangement. A few months ago he brought most of the Washington taxicab companies together in an agreement to establish uniform rates and zones. Other problems in which Mr. Keech has taken an active interest are the exclusion of interstate buses from congested streets and preservation of the 3-cent street car fare for school children.

The movement in support of Mr. Keech seems entirely non-partisan, as it should be. He is a voteless citizen of Washington. His lifelong residence in the District and his experience give him a unique capacity to serve as people's counsel.

The Sugar Proposal.

If there were any prospect of Cuban recovery without prior solution of the sugar problem, the President probably would not be recommending classification of sugar beets and sugar cane as "basic agricultural commodities." These they are not, either in respect to the value of domestic sugar output, or in respect to the number of producers. Such classification, however, makes possible control of production through application of the processing-tax machinery. And this control in turn permits extension to Cuba of an import quota sufficient to insure that country at least a measure of economic stability.

In developing the formula which has now been submitted to Congress, the Departments of State and Agriculture have worked hand in hand. The concern of the former has been based not merely on knowledge that political improvement in Cuba depends upon resuscitation of the island's sugar industry. It is also due to appreciation of our partial responsibility for the overdevelopment of that industry, encouraged by the Reciprocity Treaty and the Platt Amendment. From the ethical viewpoint, therefore, there can be nothing but praise for the Administration's effort to provide a market for such part of the Cuban sugar output as we can readily absorb. This is practical diplomacy of a far-reaching and admirable character. It will substantiate and reinforce the good impression made by Secretary Hull at Montevideo.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration, on the other hand, is particularly concerned with the protection of domestic interests, producer and consumer alike. Its dual contribution to the measure before Congress meets those responsibilities. The requisite assurance for consumers is provided by the ingenious proposal that application of the processing-tax shall be balanced by equivalent reduction in the tariff on sugar. And resentment on the part of our producers will be difficult to sustain in view of the calculation of domestic quotas, both for beet and cane, on the average marketings of the past three years.

Unlike many of its proposals, there is nothing half-baked or premature about the Administration's sugar relief plan. It is an outgrowth, with decided improvements, of the sugar stabilization plans submitted to the AAA last summer. This was sidetracked, perhaps from fear that it put too much power in the hands of the refiners. But the quotas then tentatively allotted have not been materially altered, except that the basic Cuban allotment has been raised, while that for domestic beet producers is cut from 1,750,000 to 1,450,000 tons. To offset this reduction, however, there is not merely the fund to be derived from processing taxes, but also the assurance of price stability which the quota system implies.

The proposal does not solve all the problems, either national or international, inherent in the collapse of the sugar market. But it represents an excellent start, and perhaps further progress may be expected from the international sugar conference shortly to be convened in London. The merits of the plan should be sufficient to carry it through Congress. It is noticeable, however, that the President has deemed it proper to sound warning that "there is a school of thought which believes that sugar ought to be on the free list," even though he does not recommend such action "at this time."

Call For A Showdown.

With the House in no mood to waste any time on such matters as bills proposing the expenditure of $500,000,000 for a Navy or $950,000,000 for the CWA, the Groover case ought to afford an opportunity for an old-fashioned argument such as the lower branch used to know. A good rough and tumble fight would not only save the face of the House, but would help it kill time while the Senate is holding its debates these days.

The Groover case involves a question of morals. Representative Homer C. Parker, of Georgia, selected George Groover as postmaster of his home town of Statesboro. W. C. Raines, of the same place, objects to the nomination on the ground that when he was superintendent of the Sunday School, he helped turn Groover out of the church after he had been convicted of gambling. Representative Parker filed an affidavit which said that back in 1917 a group at a Statesboro boarding house engaged in a friendly little "two-bit limit" poker game and the indignant town marshal arrested them. The Congressman remembers the incident well, because he was also in the game, was indicted on his own testimony, and pleaded guilty.

Since his appointee has been challenged, Mr. Parker ought to get the matter to the floor of the House as a matter of personal privilege. Then, he might follow the example of "Private John" Allen, uncle of District Commissioner George Allen. Mr. Allen was trying to take a Congressional seat away from a Confederate general, who had won it because he was a veteran. The general tried to retain it by narrating his heroic exploits in the Civil War, until one day he met Mr. Allen on the stump. The latter suggested that he, too, had been in the Civil War, if only as a modest private, and that, while claiming no particular heroism, he had a proposition to make the general: Let all the generals vote for the general and all the privates vote for Mr. Allen. People of the district liked the proposition and sent Mr. Allen to Congress, to stay here about two decades.

Mr. Parker could wipe out that indictment of 1917 and win a smashing vindication for himself and his postmastership nominee if he asked the House to divide on poker and non-poker-playing lines. Some traditions are dead, but the spirit of Uncle Joe Cannon lives on.

Not A Party Issue.

In greater or lesser degree graft exists under all forms of government. It is no respecter of party lines, of social classes, or of geographical divisions. The evil is especially difficult to keep within moderate bounds, however, in a Democracy, where a great majority of responsible administrative offices are filled by popular election or through political preferment.

When these elected or appointed officials are in a position to disburse large sums of public money and to grant or withhold valuable privileges, the opportunities for fraudulent or often simply ignorant dissipation of public resources are legion. Consequently the American people can not expect to be secured against the assaults of the grafter and his close ally, the political spoilsman. Relative immunity can only be obtained by perpetual warfare against the forces of corruption and the practices that border on dishonesty.

The air mail scandals, the allegations of fraud in connection with Army supply contracts, the wasteful handling and misuse of civil works funds, all emphasize the necessity for constant vigilance. These revelations are a timely warning that a New Deal which involves public outlays amounting to many billions of dollars does not guarantee the emergence of a New Morality in Governmental affairs.

The people are unquestionably disturbed by the unsavory evidence of graft and unethical conduct in public and private life as revealed or outlined by recent official investigations. Sporadic attempts to make partisan political capital out of these disclosures have been apparent from time to time. However, recent disclosures, involving persons connected with both parties and with the present as well as with the last Administration, should serve as a warning against efforts of this sort.

The individual grafter is a product of an imperfect political system. He flourishes whenever and wherever public funds are flowing abundantly, whether times are good or bad, and whether Republicans or Democrats are in control. Present conditions are exceptionally favorable to the growth and extension of the graft system. Recognition of that fact does not necessarily cast discredit upon those in authority, but merely calls for energetic support of their efforts to eliminate the grafter and his accomplices without thought of the political consequences.

This support will be accorded President Roosevelt's action yesterday in canceling airmail contracts. It was a drastic method of striking at the manifold abuses of the subsidy system that have been revealed, but the companies which suffer have invited the penalty.

Weeding Them Out.

It will be only a matter of time, if Federal agents maintain their recent high average, before the men who kidnaped Edward G. Bremer, the St. Paul banker, and extracted a $200,000 ransom from his distracted father, are apprehended. In only two other cases out of the nine outstanding kidnapings of the past twelve months have the Federal agents failed to catch their quarry. In one of those cases, arrests were made, but a jury acquitted.

Kidnaping is the most hazardous, the most brutal and the most stupid form of extorting money. Its brutality lies in the torture to which it subjects the victim and his family. It is hazardous because, while it is easy to "snatch" a victim, it is extremely difficult to make safe contacts with those who are expected to pay the ransom. The stupidity of kidnaping, from the criminal standpoint, is that few ever "get away with it." There was a brief time in which great sums were paid for the return of the victims and kidnapers seemed to be having things their way. But a study of statistics, particularly since the Federal Government got into the field, would convince anybody except a moron—and many criminals are morons—that it is a form of crime that does not pay.

Harvey Bailey and his gangsters are spending a lifetime in prison. Sankey, backed into the corner, took his own life. A roll call of kidnapers would show the leading figures dead, impounded or nervous fugitives within a narrowing circle of retribution.

On War Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a sad commentary on human intelligence and logic that 15 years after a war to end war and to make the world safe for democracy we are asked to subscribe to bigger naval appropriations than ever.

I wish that some of the unthinking minds that parrot such timeworn cliches as "A Navy Second to None" and "Adequate National Defense" would be called upon to define their terms. In the insanity of a competitive armament race, how long does any navy remain second to none?

I vigorously object to further increase in taxation burdens for a huge naval and military program (which, incidentally, I should think, would help very little to balance the budget—or has that been completely forgotten?); but I should be glad to subscribe to a fund to be employed in investigation of the propaganda activities of munitions makers and professional war mongers right here in Washington and in every other seat of government, where they ply their trade by spying alleged war clouds on every horizon. This propaganda is swallowed whole by ingenuous minds who then begin to talk of the "inevitability" of the next war, as if war were something like rain that fell without human agency from the sky.

A good definition of a militarist is "one who is ready at all times to lay down your life for his country." THERESA RUSSELL.

Washington, Feb. 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many books have been written to prove that war is hell and every Sunday rotogravure sections of many papers print terrifying pictures of the horrors of war.

This is done, I assume by some propaganda bureaus of pacifists trying to guide the masses to lofty ideals. These are fruitless efforts, my friends. You do not understand human nature. A band playing "The Star-Spangled Banner" or "Over There" or any military march, will enroll practically all the youth of America, ready and willing to fight and I feel that I will join them, too, in spite of the fact that I have witnessed two wars and I have been a scholar of humanism. The cause doesn't matter at all, so long as the American flag will wave gloriously in the breeze. The fighting spirit is inborn in the nature of man.

If this can happen in a country formed by the conglomeration of many races, guided by men of high ideals, great humanitarians without the slightest taint of imperialism, imagine, my friends, what is going to happen in Europe, where in every school it is taught to breathe hate for everybody born on the other side of a river or mountain or a sea and where every leader dreams to become a new Caesar or a new Napoleon.

Books, magazines, papers breathing hatred are distributed every day among the younger element, very easily inflamed, and as soon as Europe finds a way to drag the United States in the fight (in order to have somebody to pay for it) you may rest assured that the most cruel and horrible war will ensue and the hatred born will be as burning and passionate as it ever was before. Nobody can change nature's trend of the masses.

The best thing to do by everyone who wants to be a good and loyal citizen of this great country, is not to interfere with the steps the Government is taking in order to be ready for any emergency. "Si vis pacem para bellum" was the old adage of the Latins. Preparedness in peace must prevent war of the future. GEORGE GAZZERA.

Washington, Feb. 5.

Answering "Unemployed."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Unemployed" in a letter to you published February 3, calls the Government employes who do not like the pay cuts a crying, babbling, narrow-minded few, like spoiled children deprived of their daily ice cream cone, and states that if he had a job and was dissatisfied with position or employer he would look elsewhere for employment and keep his mouth shut.

I assume that "Unemployed" means that had he been in the service during the World War, when prices and wages shot up, profiteering was rampant, but transfers to positions at higher salaries were prohibited by law in the Government service, he would have gotten out and found a higher salaried job. Or perhaps, during the post-war booms, when prices again shot up and alleged mechanics wore silk shirts, but "Economy" was the watchword on Government payrolls and our salaries were not increased to meet the high cost of living, "Unemployed" would have sensibly gone out to get himself some of those silk shirts. Or possibly "Unemployed" means that if I stepped out now and he could pass the qualifying examination and hold my job, that as soon as an inflationary boom or a war comes along again and prices shot up but Government salaries stayed down, he would take his knowledge or the regulations, policies, methods, laws and decisions peculiar to the Government's business, along with his knowledge of an established Government pay-cutting precedent, to some corporation which would pay him more in good times.

Please extend to "Unemployed" my thanks for the suggestion. I am thinking it over after my 18 years experience during which I have put into the Treasury many hundreds of dollars for every dollar I shall ever draw out. CHARLES GALE.

Hyattsville, Md., Feb. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Being myself a Government worker, I have read with interest the letter of "Unemployed," appearing in your February 3 issue.

While sympathizing with some of the sentiment expressed by "Unemployed," I must take issue with the assumption that Government workers are ignorant of and indifferent to the "thousands upon thousands of cases" of distress "in these United States." Let me inform "Unemployed" through your columns that Government workers in the City of Washington alone send thousands of dollars through the mails each payday to alleviate the distress of poverty-stricken and dependent relatives back home in the various States. This fact is worthy of consideration in any discussion of Government workers and their pay.

Furthermore, the so-called 15 per cent cut is nothing more nor less than a poorly disguised income tax levied upon the earnings of Government workers. The only justification ever offered for this tax has been that of National necessity. Events of the past few months have clearly shown that this necessity does not exist. Surely, no such necessity exists while billions of dollars of tax-exempt securities are yielding unearned income upon which no income tax is levied!

B. Z. M.

Washington, Feb. 5.

The Devaluated Dollar.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Devaluation of the dollar, in plain English, simply means that our Government has helped itself to a portion of the people's money. Those that think otherwise and that a 60-cent dollar is as desirable as one with 100 cents, should return to school and study arithmetic again. Or, if still unconvinced, take a trip abroad and discover that the "Roosevelt dollar" is worth just about 60 cents—no more, no less.

The misled masses have been pacified by the absurd utterance that the dollar is as good as it ever was because it contains the same number of cents. They have overlooked the important fact that the dollar could be debased another 40 per cent or so and still theoretically contain 100 pennies. In reality the "new" dollar is virtually only a half-dollar or will end partly decapitated.

Eventually, of course, the people will realize that the U. S. A. helped itself to 40 per cent of their money. Some $3,000,000,000 was simply transferred from their pockets to Uncle Sam's Treasury. That this step was necessary in order to stabilize conditions is, of course, open to debate. In any event, however, prices are bound to soar and as a result, armies dependant on fixed wages, small pensions, annuities or bond interest, will suffer. When our legislators inform us that 60 cents is equivalent to 100 cents then their heads should be examined. E. GAINSBORO.

Washington, Feb. 1.

As Others See It

Murder to Music.

War, says Secretary Hull, is "nothing less than murder and assassination." It is something more, indeed. It is more ignominious, more loathsome than simple murder or assassination. It is meaner and infinitely more nefarious for the reason that men go to such stupid and irrational lengths in their attempts to glorify it. The simple murderer usually lurks in the shadows, strikes from the dark and slinks cravenly away. He is condemned of men. He is hunted down and, if caught, tried for his crime.

How different that "murder and assassination" which is war! Committed on a wholesale basis to the music of the bands, the waving of the flags and the approving plaudits of the crowd, it is twisted and distorted in the popular mind until it assumes a resplendent and shining glamour. Murder and assassination become heroic, the blood that is spilt is "martyr" blood, men are suddenly discovered to be defending a "holy cause" and prayers go up to God.

Each side's cause is the holy cause and each side sends up its prayers to God. Young men are unceremoniously hustled away to fight for the "right." There is much chatter and hectic eloquence about "God and our native land," about striking for our "altars and our fires." Calculating gentlemen who manipulate the diplomatic strings point to a long list of "glorious" deeds and heroes of the past as legitimate incentives for the slaughter of the present; point to battles and to heroes and urge their own unsuspecting youth on to fresh and greater "triumphs." But it is murder and assassination just the same. It is a shambles where men kill men they do not hate and who do not hate them; where genius slaughters genius; where the "heroes" are herded forward over the grim terrain, to meet in mortal combat other herds of youth's fair flower and battle it out to the death.

And what comes of it, at last? Is the world any better off? Far from it! The world is infinitely worse off. Not only does youth lie dead and crippled, but ideals are shattered, dreams blasted, mountains of insupportable debts are piled upon the weary shoulders of the survivors. The world, it is perceived, has gone cynical and bitter. Much of the work of preceding years, decades or generations will have to be done over. A blighting chill has swept hissing across the world, shriveling up much that was lofty and noble within the heart and soul of men. Foul murder has been done—and all the martial music uniforms and patriotic fervor in the world can not wipe out the shame and utter folly of it.

Carlisle Bargeron

BARGERON.

LAWYERS, of course, have their own way of pursuing things, usually an involved one, but why would it not be a cracker-jack defense for the gentlemen facing the Senate contempt charges to contend that they didn't take its subpoena seriously because they were under the impression that the Senate had ceased functioning? It strikes me that they would get somewhere with this.

They could appear most bewildered as they sit in the chamber, rub their eyes frequently as if ascertaining if they were seeing alright, and say "Honestly Senators, are you all still sitting; we thought you had gone out of existence long ago."

• • • •

The subpoena which they received they could insist they thought was some practical joke being played upon them by a friend. They would know, of course, that there used to be a Senate, used to read about it in the newspapers every day. Indeed, it used to be just about the most powerful body in the world. It made Presidents and broke them. It even got to the point of spanking the Supreme Court.

But the defendants would seem to be on safe ground in explaining that those things they associated with a Senate of long ago. Why, one seldom hears of it these days. Because of its conduct the impression out in the country pretty much is that some sort of an agency exists up there on Capitol Hill to say "yes" to everything that the White House suggests but that there is nothing of a Legislative body any more.

It might easily be that, because of the conditions under which we are living, one would laugh heartily at getting a Senate subpena whereas once he would have reddened in the face.

• • • •

Power after power has been delegated to the Administration. Why wasn't it fair to assume that the subpena power had been delegated, too. For that matter, the defendant's lawyers could do no better than get a postponement of their trial and then make a thorough search of just what all Congress has delegated to the Administration. It is not wholly unlikely that it may have delegated its subpena power in the delegating rush.

Now just put yourself in the defendant's position. Suppose a man had walked up to you recently and handed you a paper which he described as a Senate subpena. The chances are ten to one that you would have said "The what?" and absent-mindedly crumpled up the paper and put it in your pocket as something funny to show your wife.

That would not be the case if the paper were described as a White House subpena. That would make you jump. It would make you jump because you have got the distinct impression the past several months that that is where the power lies.

There is no doubt in my mind that these defendants would arouse a lot of sympathy by crossing their hearts and insisting that they had fogot there was a Senate. Newspapers throughout the country would carry headlines reading: "Air-mail defendants say they didn't know there was a Senate any more."

And people reading these headlines would scratch their heads and observe they didn't know it continued to exist, themselves.

After all, the Senate's subpena power to compel the attendance of function. The whole theory of its power to compel the attendance of witnesses and papers is that it must have information on which it can intelligently legislate.

But it is a fact, scarcely debatable, that the way it has functioned the past several months it did not need any information at all. Or, rather, the only information it needed was what was the attitude of the White House.

George Meredith.

The centenary of the birth of George Meredith passed in 1928 with very little attention; even among the well-read, only a few noticed it. One reason for this neglect was that he had to compete—for it is only after a great writer's death that competition with rivals becomes really dangerous—with two writers born in the same year with himself, Tolstoi and Ibsen.

When Matthew Arnold lectured in Boston, he deliberately gave some offense by saying that Emerson was not a great writer (in the sense that Swift was a great writer) but rather a great man who wrote books. That remark applies perhaps even better to Meredith. There can be no doubt that he was a man of genius; but despite the adoration of his worshipers, he never succeeded in producing absolute masterpieces, either in prose or verse. He wrote verse because he wanted to; novels from necessity. "Poetry is my Muse," he said; "prose is my kitchen wench."

Perhaps he was greatest as a letter-writer; for the letters to his friends are remarkable in themselves, and inspiring as a revelation of a truly great soul. Those who knew him best, like J. M. Barrie, loved and admired him most.

Yet his novels deserve a far larger number of readers; and let me suggest to those who have read little or nothing by Meredith, that they begin by reading Rhoda Flaming. This is comparatively "easy" reading; it is also magnificent.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Two Little Girls Far Away and Long Ago.

You remember, last year, "Julia Newberry's Diary"—the day by day observations of a young girl of the sixties and seventies, set down with such honesty and clear-sightedness, such untrammeled naivete and charming directness that Clemence Dane was assuredly justified in wondering if in Julia "the American Jane Austen was not lost." For more than 60 years that diary, a hasp-bound, morocco book, had lain in an attic, and then it was discovered and published by the house of Norton.

And perhaps you remember, in that story of a Chicago rearing and European school and travel which reverted time and again to her younger friend, Minnie Clapp, an entry Julia wrote in Paris in October, 1871—bewailing the fact that the Chicago fire had burned "all my drawings from the beginning & my first water-colors, my monogramme book, & oh misery all my journals." That was pain, for her father (Walter Newberry, one of the founders of Chicago and donor of the Newberry Reference Library) had once said: "Be something, July!" and she had been filled with a passion of ambition ever since.

But Julia had forgot something, beside the diary in hand, which the fire had not destroyed. For all we know it was still forgot when she died at Rome at the age of 22.

In March, 1933, a Miss Tracy D. Mygatt, of Croton Falls, N. Y., took home to her elderly mother an advance notice of the publication of "Julia Newberry's Diary." I suppose the two of them could scarcely believe their eyes—there in cold type was what they thought had been a private memory. To them Julia Newberry meant a family legend, vivid, cherished, and secret. For Mrs. Mygatt was Minnie Clapp, and out of her attic came at once another little leather-bound book which she and Julia had worked over together in a Swiss "pensionnat" 65 years before.

Today is published "Julia Newberry's Sketch Book; or The Life of Two Future Old Maids" (Norton, $2.50), a little book quite perfect in its way. It is beautifully printed and bound (like the old-fashioned sketch-book—the "back" on the short side). The text is written down by Miss Mygatt from Mrs. Mygatt's memories of her idol, and 18 drawings and the prefatory note from the old sketch-book are reproduced. I have seldom seen so appealing a memento of our grandparents' days.

After their lessons were done, the two little girls would climb to their third-story room at 13 Malagnou, Geneva, dream of the life they would lead, and Julia would picture it in these delightful drawings. What was it like, this life they imagined in nostalgia and castle building at once? I can do no better than set down the sketch-book's preface just as Julia wrote it:

"My cousin Minnie Clapp & I, Julia R. Newberry, she is 12 years old and I am 14, have long since decided that we will never marry but be two jolly old maids & live in a house of our own in Chicago. The following pages represent our idea of 'Old Maidism' & how we expect to live, the differint parts of our establishment, etc. etc. We do not expact to be atall melancholy but to give balls, dinners & every sort of entertainment except teafights; besides, we will chaperone all our young friends; & if guilty of match-making it will be only on a very modest scale. We expect to settle down between 20 and 30 years of age, in fact as soon as it will be proper. We shall be happy to receive visits from all our friends, young & old batchelors, married & unmarried ladies, everybody except children which we respectfully request may be left behind.

"JULIA R. NEWBERRY
"Oct. 15, 1868."

The drawings, solemn little pencil sketches of ladies in "polonaises and redingotes," all "puffings and tuckings," the gentlmen in "demi-tight pantaloons and bowlers," are priceless. Julia liked the pictures in Harper's Weekly, and their flavor shows in these scenes of breakfast over the Chicago Journal, dressing for the ball, 5 o'clock tea, taking care of a sick soldier in a hospital, and so on. It was a dream of Victorian stability.

And it did not happen. Julia, long ill with consumption, worn out by travel, by her passionate striving to "be something," died in a Rome hotel eight years later. "Cover her face. Mine eyes dazzle. She died young." When Minnie heard the news, she ran from the room dry-eyed, crying out, "I have lost my soul!" Then she lived on and on, and gave us this book.

MacCracken Evades Arrest, Defies Senate on Contempt

"unable to locate the said William P. MacCracken," the Senate voted to go on with the other three.

Protesting that he had only "the highest respect for the Senate," MacCracken's six-page prepared statement, which arrived instead of MacCracken, continued that the defendant was nevertheless "compelled to point out that the procedure was a violation of his Constitutional rights.

The full Senate floor, even the jammed galleries, were quiet as the clerk read the defiance in loud and impressive tones. It was an unexpected move.

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the investigating committee that brought the charges, after the first few lines were read, began hastily to pencil out the resolution to order MacCracken's arrest.

Black Nonplussed.

Looking tired and pale, the usually energetic Alabaman seemed momentarily nonplused as he realized MacCracken's move.

He regained some of his enthusiasm later, however, when he triumphantly produced the mangled, pasted-up letters which his investigators dug out of the basement of the National Press Building, and began a quietly insistent examination of Brittin.

Brittin had been asked why he had gone to MacCracken's office and removed certain papers that were under subpena by the committee. Repeating his earlier testimony, Brittin said he removed them because they were "personal and I felt could be of no interest to the committee." He said he took them to his office in the Press Building, tore them up and threw them in the waste basket.

His decision to go himself to the basement in search of torn bits of paper was forestalled, he said, when Black's investigators got there first.

Black produced five letters, two telegrams, and one memorandum, all relating to air mail or operation. The most personal note of all the correspondence was the greeting, "Dear Ben" on a letter addressed to Ben Meyers, identified as a Post-office official in Chicago.

Brittin said he "did not know" whether the restored correspondence was that which he removed from MacCracken's office or not, even after Black pointed out that one letter had a marginal penciled note "MacCracken's copy," and that one of the telegrams was noted "Chg MacCracken & Lee," the name of the former Department of Commerce official's law firm.

Memory Is Taxed.

The witness, standing stiffly behind the clerk's desk in the center of the Senate well, hesitated for many minutes before he answered Black's repeated requests for identification of "Dear Ben." He said he "preferred not to disclose."

"The letter was only about air mail and postoffice contracts or extensions, wasn't it? Nothing more personal than that?" asked Black.

"Well, yes."

At the end of the examination, Senator King (Democrat), Utah, one of the committee members, repeatedly asked Brittin whether he could recall the name of even one of the addresses on the letters he took from MacCracken's office.

"No, not one."

"You took them less than a week ago and yet you can't remember?"

"Yes. That's true."

Meanwhile, MacCracken's whereabouts remained somewhat of a mystery. Jurney reported that Frank J. Hogan, attorney for MacCracken, refused to tell him where the missing man was, although he offered to take him personally to his client.

Jurney braved the cold once more and scurried back to the Senate for further instructions. That body extended the warrant for arrest, but this time Jurney sent out deputies.

Cold Balks Justice.

At a late hour Jurney said that the cold was too much even for deputies and that no attempt would be made to serve the warrant until 11 a. m. today.

Hogan, on whose personal bond MacCracken was released Monday when he was first arrested, is prepared to seek a writ of habeas corpus the moment his client is officially in the custody of the sergeant at arms.

Both Hanshue and his aid, Givvin, had prepared statements ready in answer to the question by Senator Pittman, President pro tempore:

"What have you to say?"

Hanshue, red-faced and heavy-set, stared stolidly as his attorney read his defense from the clerk's desk. Givvin, young, with curly black hair, tried to read his own statement, but at the protest of several Senators in the back that they could not hear, he turned it over to the clerk.

Givvin explained how he had taken the correspondence at the request of Hanshue and with the assistance of MacCracken, adding:

"I realize now that I made a mistake, and I regret very much having taken those papers. I also realize I made a mistake in not exercising my own judgment instead of depending on Mr. MacCracken's about what were personal letters."

Hanshue detailed how he had received the papers by mail and sent them back to Washington the next day by one of the company's officials.

Among the pieced-together documents offered to Brittin for identification was a telegram to R. C. Lilly, president of the St. Paul First National Bank, and identified by Brittin as a former president of Northwest Airways.

Argued Against Code.

It was marked "confidential" and was also charged to the MacCracken and Lee account. It said that "E. T. Stettinius, speaking for the General Motors group of air mail lines, advises the air mail operators not to sign the blanket code as certain of its provisions when added to the 25 per cent cut in rates imposes an unreasonable burden on the industry."

It further quotes Stettinius as saying that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, had agreed to accept a "very brief emergency code from the air mail lines embodying their present practice."

It was arranged that on receipt of this code each line would receive a Blue Eagle "without hearings or delay."

All of the correspondence was dated in August and September, 1933, and dealt primarily with the proposed acquisition of the National Parks lines by the Northwest, and with methods of meeting the 25 per cent cut in rates ordered at that time by Postmaster General Farley.

Grand Jurors Hunt 'Insiders' In Army Probe

Woodring May Be Recalled Rep. Collins Revealed as Father of Inquiry.

have a speed of 230 miles an hour, a cruising radius of 500 miles and an altitude capacity of 27,800 feet. After a conference called by Mr. Woodring these specifications were changed to provide for a speed of 167 miles an hour, a cruising radius of 388 miles and altitude capacity of 18,700 feet.

Missing Witness Sought.

Mr. Woodring told the committee he had sponsored the changes in an effort to obtain competitive bidding on Army planes. It was brought out that only one manufacturer could comply with the original specifications.

The grand jury will resume its investigation Monday, recessing for the week end. In the meanwhile the search will continue for the missing witness, identified as Frank Speicher, a representative of an inner tube manufacturer. His testimony is regarded as essential to the investigation.

It is understood that the evidence now before the grand jury indicates that three men approached various automobile manufacturers and suggested that they be employed to obtain Government contracts for them. This trio, it is alleged, represented themselves as possessing "inside influence" and contacts in the War Department through which they could manipulate the awarding of contracts for the Army's $10,000,000 motorization program.

It is further alleged that these conspirators proposed that the motorization purchases be pooled among those manufacturers willing to pay the group a so-called "underwriting fee," amounting in some cases to 15 per cent of the business obtained by the manufacturer. The awarding of bids under the motorization program, however, have been held up due to the disclosure of this conspiracy.

The grand jury, having developed this evidence, is now engaged in trying to find out whether the conspirators implicated actually possessed the "inside influence." The inquisitors also want to determine whether specifications for trucks and automobiles were changed in the War Department after they left the technical divisions, and if so, why such alterations were made.

Army Officers Before Jury.

It is reported reliably that specifications for trucks were altered, but it is not known whether the changes were made for sound technical reasons. The trio under scrutiny by the grand jury, it is asserted, claimed power to have specifications arranged satisfactorily for manufacturers paying the "underwriting fee."

The Army officers before the grand jury yesterday were Col. James K. Crain and Lieut. Col. Earl North, Army procurement officers attached to Mr. Woodring's office; Col. Benjamin F. Miller, chief of Army transport; Maj. William B. Harding and Col. A. O. Seaman, the latter in the Militia Bureau.

Leslie C. Garnett, United States District Attorney, said he thought the grand jury investigation would consume several more days when it is resumed next week.

Mr. Collins issued a statement explaining, in reference to Mr. Garnett's offer that he appear before the grand jury, that his "appearance would serve no useful purpose because every bit of information that I possess and the names of every person I know who could throw any light upon the matters under investigation, I turned over to the White House and the Department of Justice two weeks ago, and judging by the names of the persons who have appeared before the garnd jury, I am inclined to believe that much of the inquiry is proceeding in consequence of the information I supplied."

The Mississippi Democrat said he did not undertake to investigate the irregularities which had come to his attention, but had passed the information to the Justice Department where "the facts could be better and more effectively developed and the blame fixed and punishment meted out more promptly."

Collins Doubts "Whitewashing."

"I am satisfied that I have pursued the better course," he said. "I know something of the prowess and ability of District Attorney Garnett, and I am confident there will be no whitewashing of any one, as so many who have come to see me seem to think will be the result.

"I know the Administration is determined to stamp out everything that even savors of impropriety, no matter the quarter or who may be involved, and nobody may expect to be shielded.

"Even if it should not be possible definitely to establish that persons in Federal employ actually have profited from the transactions which have been called to the attention of the Department of Justice, I at least confidently look for some removals to occur, because, as I heard a member of Congress say the other day, 'there either has been crookedness or gross dumbness,' and there is no room for either in our public service."

Copeland Explains Intercession.

In The Post's story yesterday reporting that Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, had said that a year ago he had sponsored at the behest of Joseph Silverman an amendment to the bill providing for distribution of Farm Board cotton to relieve destitution, there was an apparent misunderstanding. Silverman, a New Yorker, was mentioned by the Justice Department in connection with the grand jury inquiry.

Senator Copeland yesterday explained that Silverman had nothing to do with his amendment to the cotton relief bill and that he did not meet Silverman until after the legislation was enacted. The New York Senator, however, said it was correct that at a later date he interceded on Silverman's behalf with the War Department, but solely because the latter was one of his constituents and claimed he was being discriminated against.

Stock Control Bill Bans All Manipulation

Rigid Regulatino Measure Introduced Without Comment.

control. But, in brief, the pending bill, simultaneously introduced by Chairman Fletcher, of the Senate Banking Committee, and by Chairman Rayburn, of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, declares that the exchanges are affected with a National interest.

It bans the use of the mails, or interstate commerce, to any exchange which does not register with the Federal Trade Commission. To register, an exchange must furnish whatever information the commission demands. Corporations, all issues of securities to be listed on the exchange, must similarly furnish the commission with complete data, down to monthly reports, in such volume that big corporations would come close to needing trucks to deliver it all.

Margins Increased.

To eliminate the small fry, the little fellow who buys on margin—and has been the commonest and the easiest victim—the bill requires that to buy a stock on marginal account he must either put up 40 per cent of the current market price, or 80 per cent of the lowest price at which the security has sold during the preceding three years—whichever is higher. By this rule, the "non-volatile" stocks, which do not fluctuate much, and good bonds, could be bought on aslow as 20 per cent margin, but active, fluctuating stocks could only be bought with the stiffer margin requirements. Margins vary now, but run around 25 per cent. In the boom days they were down to 5-10 per cent.

Borrowing Curtailed.

Sharp curbs wold be put on borrowing by exchange members, brokers and dealers. They may only borrow from a member bank, and they may not borrow more than 10 times their assets. They may not hypothecate or lend customers' securities without consent of the customers.

Wash sales, matched orders, every known kind of manipulation wolud be outlawed. Heavy penalties are provided—up to 10 years in jail, $25,000 fine, for individuals, fines up to $500,000 against exchanges, and on top of these stiff civil suit damages could be claimed by deceived or mulcted investors. A broker or customers' man who whispered to a client that a pool was about to operate in a certain stock would become a law-breaker under the act.

It devotes several paragraphs to defining illegal spreading of information designed to affect the market unnaturally. Section 8 expressly outlaws all combinations of sales or purchases designed to affect prices, the spreading of rumors of impending manipulations, or the dissemination of misleading information, paying for spread of such information, pegging prices without explaining why to the commission, cornering a security, use of options and trading against options.

Commission Powers.

The Commission is given plenary power to prescribe for short sales and stop-loss orders. It may ban short sales entirely if it so decrees—and so broad is its grant of authority that it may prescribe controls over practices—if there are any—not covered specifically by the bill.

Exchange members and those who operate through them are forbidden to underwrite securities. Specialists must register as such, and may not execute orders except at fixed prices, nod may they disclose confidential information without giving it to all exchange members.

New Haror Laws Sought by District

Proposed Measure Would Authorize Revision.

Authorization to make harbor regulations along the District waterfront is asked by the District Commissioners in a bill sent to Congress yesterday.

The bill was sent to Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee.

The present anchorage area, the Commissioners pointed out, is inadequate and the present regulations are obsolete since they were promulgated in the age of sailing vessels. Before the regulations are promulgated, the bill provides for a public hearing. All regulations would be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War.

Santiago, Cuba, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Rotary Club today began a campaign for a United States rum quota of 4,000,000 gallons a year.

The club said such a quota would give permanent employment to 1,500 men in Santiago's famous factories.

The Once-Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE NEW STANDARDS.

I had a dream the other night,
It should have startled me,
But my alarm was very slight,
As slight as it could be.

The hours of the day, I dreamed,
Were cut by Washington;
Instead of 24 it seemed
There now were 21.

'Twas 10 o'clock, I heard them say,
Though it was midnight then;
They then explained that each new day
Would now begin at 10.

The hours' content had been cut
By Congressmen who swore
Such action could do nothing but
Make every day worth more.

Per capita we'd have more days,
They said in tones profound,
Thus giving people (Heaven praise!)
Enough to go around.

We'd have more minutes for each man
And for each woman, too,
Increasing life's accepted span
For you, and you and you.

Ten months, I dreamed, were now a year
By Washington's decree
(Which two would have to disappear
Was not quite clear to me).

The mile would be 4,000 feet
(I heard some experts talk),
So people hiking up a street
Would not have far to walk.

The yard was fixed at 2 point 6,
Affording yards to spare
So people would not need yardsticks
To get their proper share.

Thermometers, I dreamed, had been Revised by rules galore
So summer could be started when
The tube read fifty-four.

The gallon had become three quarts,
The pound ten ounces, and
Four hundred dollars, said reports,
Were equal to a "grand."

"How old are you?" I heard some one
Inquire in my dream;
"I'm eighty, close to eighty-one,"
I said, my face agleam.

"What nonsense! You're an infant boy,"
I heard in tones well rounded;
"We've changed the rate of living, Boy,
Your age has been impounded!"

AND THE BALLOT BOX IS A TOUGH REFEREE.

"Senator Huey Long's Star Believed to Be Setting."—Headline. Well, the life of an active pugilist is brief at best.

A Nazi cult leader is rewriting the Bible from the German viewpoint. The Nazi idea of paradise is probably a place with a sign over the entrance reading, "Gentiles Only."

The stock market is boiling and there are almost as many splendid opportunities to lose all your money as were afforded back in the boom era.

D. C. Heads Favor Bill To Open Graves Here

The District Commissioners yesterday approved a bill pending in the Senate which would give the District Health Officer discretionary power to permit the disinterment of bodies of persons who have died from contagious diseases.

Under the present law, the reopening of the graves of persons whose death is caused by highly contagious diseases is forbidden. A special act of Congress is now required to remove the body of such a person.

Harbor-Grounded Boat Floats After 16 Hours

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—The two-mated schooner, Evira, bearing 38 amateur explorers on a cruise of the Carribean and the Pacific, was floated after having been aground for 16 hours at the entrance to New York harbor.

The ship went aground just after setting sail yesterday from Brooklyn. Acost guard cutter stood by, but there apparently was no danger to those aboard.

Jeanne Aubert's Pearls in Court

Actress "Surprised" Hubby Didn't Pay $10,000.

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Jeanne Aubert, musical comedy singer, today testified that the two pearls for which a jewelry firm is trying to collect $10,000 from her were, she had understood, gifts from her former husband.

The suit was brought against Miss Aubert by the firm of Lebolt & Co., of New York and Paris.

The vivacious stage star said she was both surprised and embarrassed when she received a bill for the pearls a few weeks after she and Col. Nelson Morris, Chicago meat packer, were divorced in 1929.

G. A. R. Ladies' New Potomac Unit Meets

Blizzard Grips Coast Shipping

Norfolk Reports Vessels Disabled, Imperiled in Frigid Seas.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Norfolk felt its coldest day in 16 years today, when the mercury dropped to 6 above zero, bringing with it strong winds and snow. The weather bureau predicted zero temperature for late tonight.

With the cold wave came reports of vessels battling high seas, and freezing winds of gale force. The Coast Guard cutter Mendota, towing the helpless schooner Purnell T. White, sent a wireless message to headquarters that she was unable to proceed because of a northerly gale, snow and vapor which obscured the vision of her pilot.

She was forced to anchor 60 miles southeast of Cape Henry. The schooner, the message said is waterlogged and her crew of eight is still on board. The Mendota was unable to take off the crew because of rough weather.

The barges Agram, Penas and Cutler, were unaccounted for tonight, acording to the Coast Guard. The barges were being towed by the tug Kaleen, which sought shelter in Delaware Breakwater. It is believed the tug anchored the barges before she put into the Breakwater.

The Virginia Pilots Association boat, Hampton Roads, broke a shaft to her feeder pipes and was forced to abandon her station at Cape Henry. The pilot boat Virginia was sent to relieve her but turned back at Lynn Haven Roads after battling high seas. She returned to port with a 40-degree list.

The Coast Guard Cutter Apache reported Chesapeake Bay jammed with ice and that many fish boats were in danger. The Apache was endeavoring to break through in the upper bay to keep open the channel to Baltimore.

Communist Beheaded For Murder of Nazi

Hamburg, Feb. 9 (AP).—Executioners wielding an ax today decapitated Arthur Retslag, a Communist, for the murder of a Nazi youth.

Rare Minerals In Small Area

Virginia Deposits Chiefly in Piedmont Region, Says Official.

Richmond, Feb. 9 (AP).—Most of Virginia's rare minerals are confined mainly to a rock type known as pegmatite which is limited to the Piedmont area of the State, Arthur A. Pegau, mineralogist of the Virginia Geological Survey, writes in the bulletin of the Virginia section of the American Chemical Society.

He adds that although these pegmatites occur in practically every Piedmont county, commercial deposits are limited to two districts—the Amelia-Goochland and the Martinsville-Lynchburg areas.

Other commercial deposits occur near Hewlett in Hanover County, near Cuckoo in Louisa County, near Abilene in Charlotte County, and on Irish Creek in Rockbridge County.

Amelia County has yielded the greatest number of rare minerals, Pegau said, with Amherst County second.

He said that deposits of mineral muscovite, for which most of the pegmatite deposits have been exploited, yielded $350,000 from 1908 to 1930.

Youth, 18, Robbed, Beaten, Left Dazed

When the youth regained consciousness and managed to reach his home, his father, Philip Stickley, armed with a gun, went to Ninevah seeking the attacker, but found no trace.

Museum Yields Ancient Relics

Ivory Statuettes, 3,500 Years Old, and Dating Back to Reign of King Minos of Crete, Discovered Boxed in Baltimore Art Gallery.

Baltimore, Feb. 9 (AP).—Two ivory relics of Crete, believed to be 3,500 years old, have been discovered among the thousands of articles of art stored in the Walters Art Gallery, recently opened to the public by the city of Baltimore as the gift of its late owner, Henry Walters.

The two relics date back to the time of Minos, King and law-giver of the island of Crete, who, according to mythology, later was made judge of Hades.

They were found by C. Morgan Marshall, acting director, and other trustees in two small boxes to which were attached a tag on which was written "great care. Not to be opened except by H. W." The handwriting was that of the late owner.

One relic is 9 inches tall and is decorated with gold, which has been loosened in some places. It is of a Minoan goddess with the 17 embellishments that usually are given to her. The other is about 6 inches high and in perfect condition.

Each wears a cone-shaped hat and wide skirts of the period, estimated by some authorities at about 1,500 years before Christ. Attached to the boxes was a manuscript signed by G. F. Euarcent, of Paris, certifying that the ivories were found in a labyrinth in the environs of the palace of Minos.

"These ivories are definitely rare and, as far as we can ascertain, there is only one other like them in the United States and that is in Boston," said Marshall who had them returned to their boxes and placed in a vault to be studied later and authenticated.

Revised Relief Boards Sought In West Virginia

Bill Proposes Names Be Submitted to Governor by Parties.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.). After receiving three new bills, one a "ripper" measure resulting from the State CWA probe, the State House of Delegates adjourned this afternoon until Tuesday. The Senate recessed yesterday until Monday.

The "ripper" bill, introduced by Delegate George C. Dixon (Democrat), Mineral, would supplant existing county welfare boards with new ones comprising two members of the majority political party and one member of the minority party, each to be named from names submitted to the governor by party executive committees.

The existing boards were appointed by the county courts upon recommendation of the State welfare department. Upon creation of the CWA they were designated as the county administrative units for National relief and reemployment activities.

Board Limit Planned.

Another bill would limit fees to sheriffs for feeding jail prisoners to actual costs after January 1, 1937, with a maximum of 40 cents per day for each prisoner, the present rate. It was introduced by Delegate C. R. Summerfield (Democrat), Fayette.

The third bill was the House plan of Congressional redistricing, introduced also by Delegate Dixon, under a decision reached in a Democratic caucus to substitute it for a measure passed by the Senate. Both bills are expected to go to a joint conference committee for settlement.

The Dixon redistricting measure places Hancock, Brook, Ohio, Marshall, Wetzel, Marion and Taylor Counties in the First District, and the following counties in the Second: Monongalia, Preston, Tucker, Barbour, Randolph, Webster, Pocahontas, Pendleton, Hardy, Grant, Mineral, Hampshire, Morgan, Berkeley, Jefferson and Upshur.

Conference Slated Today.

A conference committee was in prospect today to settle differences between both Houses over appropriations for the State Department of Agriculture.

The House late yesterday approved a cut of 25 per cent in the appropriations, but turned down Senate amendments providing payment of county farm agents from Federal and State funds. The measure was then repassed by the House, with an amendment leaving employment of the farm agents to the discretion of county courts. After approving the reduction, the House killed a bill abolishing the department.

Court to Hear Plea to Open Frederick Bank

Petition for End of Central Trust Receivership Set for Monday.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—A hearing on the petition of John J. Ghinger, State bank commissioner and receiver of the closed Central Trust Co. to terminate the receivership will be held before Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge Arthur D. Willard in Circuit Court Monday, it was announced today. It is expected to be one of the most important hearings during the two and a half years of the receivership.

The question before the court will be whether to approve the proposed plan of reorganization. Should the plan meet with approval, the next step of the court will be to fix a fair liquidating value for depositors who objected to reorganization plans. There are nearly 200 such depositors.

The fair liquidating value having been fixed, the succeeding step, it is expected, will be opening of the reorganized bank and the setting up of five other separate banks. The plan of reorganization was approved by Mr. Ghinger November 24.

It is likely the receiver or his representatives will submit figures to indicate the fair liquidating value of the institution. Should the court act favorably upon the petition it is expected this information will form the basis for the determination of the liquidating value in order to settle with depositors who decided not to go along with the erorganization plan.

Junior League Turns Blue Eagle Into Lark

"Wear Something New" Ball, Complete With Service Stripes for Shoppers and the New Deal in Marx Brothers' Wigs, Beguiles Merry Party.

This morning the Blue Eagle rose a trifle late because he was out last evening attending the Junior League's "W. S. N." (Wear Something New) Ball at the Mayflower Hotel. However, as he soars aloft to begin his day's overseeing, he will think back with much satisfaction on a highly successful and most enjoyable party.

The Mayflower lobby was filled early, the promenade was filled and every nook and corner was filled with people waiting their turn to pass inspection by the two jolly "customs officials," Mr. McCook Dunlop and Mr. Samuel Beach. Upon declaration of a recent acquirement in the way of attire or trinkets, Mr., Mrs. and Miss "Bought Something New" were given a service stripe. Later in the evening the person wearing the most badges-of-spending was given a prize.

In the grand ballroom couples whirled and glided, each new frock shimmering against the staid and dignified background of black and white dress suits. At the stroke of 11 dancers took to the boxes and tables to watch the entertainment.

Fashion Exhibition And the "Allegrias."

First there was a fashion show which had all the atmosphere of an exclusive walnut-paneled shop. The models, in the order of their appearance, were Miss Mary McDowell, Mrs. Campbell Pritchett, Mrs. Andrew Saul, Miss Beatrice Phillips, Mrs. E. Cortlandt Parker, Miss Katherine Pearson, Miss Mary W. Bradley, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, Mrs. Marshall O. Exnicios, Mrs. Frederick Hitz, Mrs. David S. Barry, jr., Miss Alice Fleming, Mrs. William Jasper DuBose, Mrs. John J. Whelan and Mrs. Ethel P. Warren.

An unexpected feature of the evening was the delightful Spanish "Allegrias," which was danced and "castinetted" by the petite Miss Anne Simpson, of the New York Junior League, who is spending this winter in the Capital with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Simpson. She wore a crisp white taffeta gown made with a full skirt of wired ruffles, which were faced with magenta, and sleeves of the same magenta-faced ruffles. A small shawl of the same rich color, and long ivory earrings, completed the costume.

Senator Millard J. Tydings, of Maryland, was the master of ceremonies. First on the program was the inimitable Mr. Brooke Johns, who strummed his familiar banjo to the delight of everybody. This was followed by a refreshingly naive dance by perky little Mrs. Crosby Boyd, attired as Sis Hopkins in her calico dress and diminutive mouse brown jacket, with a wee waistline and huge sleeves, small white hat with upturned brim, a chin strap and a pair of rigid flowers. One blond pigtail was tied with red ribbons and the other with green. In one hand she carried a small but threatening parasol and in the other clutched a modern version of the historical carpet bag. The black patent leather and "spatted" feet were most nimble in their tapping, gliding and skipping.

Valentine Figures Tread a Waltz.

Next came Miss Marion Worthington and Mr. Phil Hayden in a coy little song and dance number, "You've Got Everything." Miss Worthington looked like a breath of the much-longed-for spring in her garden frock of light blue organdy, with a fischu of yellow organdy, and a large picture hat of yellow with blue flowers. Number 4 on the program was the graceful waltz quadrille, which was danced to the lilting strains of the Merry Widow Waltz by Miss Katherine Dunlop and Mr. C. Griffith Warfield, Mrs. Theodore Noyes and Mr. Edward Becker, Mrs. Donald McKnew and Lieut Frederick Coleman, and Mrs. Oscar Coolican and Mr. Samuel H. Kauffman. The various figures were like scenes from dainty valentines, with the gentlemen attired in formal black and white, and their partners in frocks of white chiffon over silver with scarlet poppies across the shoulders, and matching slippers. A challenge to the present weather conditions was the following number, "Heat Wave," presented by Miss Elizabeth Gill, wearing a short very fitted dress of poppy pink combined with black and white dotted pique, and a huge, much befeathered hat. The long gloves were of the same pink and on the right hand was a mammoth "diamond" ring; and Lieut Alexander Stone, who is clever at the piano, was attired in a before-the-war style of suit, a brown derby, rose necktie and spats. Following this, Mr. Kurt Hetzel gave a few, too few, selections at the piano.

Political Foursome and Eagle Ballet.

More and more the familiar head of politics has been seen rearing itself in the most unexpected places, so there it was again in the midst of the cabaret, this time in a humorous skit. The characters were Gen. "Groucho" Johnson, Prof. "Harpo" Tugwell, Secretary "Chico" Morgenthau, and the Hon. "Zeppo" Farley, who were played by Mr. Harry Dawson, Mr. Reeve Hoover, Mr. Charles H. James, and Mr. Tudor Morsell.

The finale was the Blue Eagle Ballet, well-executed under the approving eyes of Prosperity, clad in gold with streamers of red, white and blue, danced by the petite Mrs. Chester W. Lockwood. The Eaglets, who were in costumes of crisp, glittering blue, were Miss Elizabeth Gill, Mrs. Harold Gillespie, Miss Katherine Hall, Miss Mary McDowell, Miss Elizabeth Mitchell, Miss Bettie Peelle, Miss Cecelia Robb, Miss Alicia Rodgers, Mrs. Charles L. Sturtevante, jr., and Miss Marion Worthington.

At 12:30 o'clock the doors of the Presidential dining room were flung open. A delicious supper was served to the revelers who laughed and chatted from table to table. Later there was more dancing, and at 2:30 o'clock the next to the last gala affair of the season, the Junior League ball, "Wear Something New," of 1934, came to an end.

Groups Entertained.

Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock entertained at a ringside table for her guests, Mrs. Price Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lowry, Miss Dorothy Sollers, Gen. Horton, Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill, Mr. Forrester Davison and Mr. Sydney Mellen. At another ringside table were Mrs. Campbell Pritchett, accompanied by Mr. T. Suffern Tailor, Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. Vivot, Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy; Sir Oliver Duncan, Mr. Frank Packard, Signor Ferrero, of the Italian Embassy; Mrs. John Caswell, Mrs. Francis Whitten, Mrs. B. Tuck, Mrs. Martha Blair and Mrs. Sydney Cloman. It was Mrs. Pritchett who suggested the "wear something new" idea to the Junior League.

Col. and Mrs. Ulysses Grant had with them, besides their two daughters, Miss Edith and Miss Clara Francis Grant, Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor, Mr. Russell Snodgrass, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Partridge, Lieut. Ellsworth Davis.

Among those at "Dutch-treat" tables were Mr. and Mrs. Corrin Strong, who shared theirs with Mr. and Mrs. William Flather; Mr. and Mrs. John Hollister, Mr. and Mrs. Armistead Peter, Mr. William Coke, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilmer.

Rosa Ponselle Wins Acclaim Of Diplomats

Famous Soprano Appears as Guest of Italian Ambassador.

Another of the charming after-dinner musicales, of which there have been several this season, was given at the Italian Embassy Thursday evening by the Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso. The Ambassador, who has been on a West Indies cruise for the past fortnight, arrived in Washington Thursday, just in time to entertain at dinner for Miss Rosa Ponselle, dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Guests gathered after dinner in the large drawing room of the Embassy, where high-backed renaissance chairs framed beautiful women in handsome gowns, and men in correct black and white. The deep rose damask draperies were drawn across the wide windows and lent a warm glow to the softly lighted room.

Miss Ponselle, wearing a gown of black mousseline de soie fashioned with long flowing sleeves, and trimmed with a lei of white, crisp flowers which outlined the deep V decolletage, gave a program which would have thrilled even the most critical listener.

Generous With Encores.

The Aria from "Cavalleria Rusticana" formed the first part of the program, and a group of Italian, French and Spanish songs completed it, but the charming prima donna was most generous with encores, and the applause amounted almost to cheering, when she rendered the "Habanera" from Bizet's "Carmen."

Later the guests adjourned to the dining room, where a magnificent buffet was laid on tables decked with large vases of colorful spring flowers. Miss Ponselle mingled with the guests, chatting animatedly.

Among those seen during the evening were the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Cardenas, with the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mme. Auffmordt, who are visiting at the Embassy during their annual visit to the Capital from their home in Paris. Both of these charming ladies, Rumanian by birth, wore gowns of gleaming white satin.

The Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva were seen chatting with the latter's brother-in-law and sister, the Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Nano. The Minister of Norway and Mme. Bachke, the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik were in a group with the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Baroness Beck-Friis.

Brilliant Assembly.

Members of the Embassy staff and their wives were as usual most gracious. Signora Casardi, wife of the Naval Attache of the Embassy, made a striking picture in a gown of black velvet fashioned with a long train, and fitted sleeves slashed from shoulder to elbow. Signora Sbernadori was in a gown of white panne velvet fashioned on fitted lines, and ornamented with tiny coral and brilliant clips.

Homberger, in Wide Travels, Has Seen Wondrous Sights

How, for Instance, Do You Suppose They Avert Breakage of New Laid Eggs on Rocky European Slopes? And Here's New Recipe for Shad Roe en Papilotte.

Through and directly because of their profession, hotel chefs are among the world's most extensive travelers. One of them has brought back to Washington his experiences in one of the earth's far corners—Egypt. There, where the Mohammedan cooks spoke German and ruined temples lined the Nile, he worked, observed and took photographs. Today the Woman's Page presents the sixth of a series of interviews with Washington's foremost chefs.

By Susan Mills.

"Tell about the chickens and the baskets, chef," Chef Homberger's secretary said.

Chef Homberger leaned back in his chair in his office at the Carlton and laughed, his white teeth gleaming in an even row.

"No, that is not news, it is only a funny story."

The secretary took matters into his own hands.

"The chef says that that one hotel in Europe had its own chicken yard. It was in back of the hotel and on a rocky slope. So little baskets were tied under the hens so the eggs wouldn't roll down hill and get broken!"

The little room echoed with peals of laughter.

"Yes, they had their own chicken yard, but in Egypt, where I once worked," the chef went on, "the meat is delivered alive—it had to be. All the beeves, hogs and sheep were brought in, and we had to kill and dress them ourselves. It is much easier in this country.

Forbidden Wine Vanishes.

"I worked in Ossuan and Luxor for a little while. It was most interesting. All the Mohammedan cooks spoke German at that time. They were not allowed to touch bacon or wine. It was the will of Allah, and if they should eat or drink those things, they would not go to heaven.

"We used to take trips across the Sahara on camels or donkeys. We would take several bottles of Palestine wine, and the odd thing was that when we got back there was always quite a little wine missing. The cooks could not drink it under their religion, but it was gone just the same, you see? We used to put strips of bacon over the pastry, too, then the pastry was polluted for the cooks, and they wouldn't eat it.

"The cooks used to make a thick soup, cook all the vegetables and meats together. When it was done, there was a thick layer of fat on the top, about 2 inches thick. This they would scrape off with pieces of bread, and eat. Not very appetizing, I thought.

Beauties of Luxor.

"But Egypt was a wonderful place. I climbed the pyramids, hand over hand up the great stones to the top. The temple at Luxor was particularly beautiful. I took some photographs of them, of the sculpture there. There was also an obelisk that had fallen down and was half buried in the earth. It was made of one stone as long as this kitchen. They had shaped the stones by rubbing a smaller stone on the surface of the larger one, so that it would wear off to the size they wanted.

"I went into the pyramids, too. There is no light inside, one has to travel through many corridors, down shafts—like this," he drew a rough sketch of the route on the back of a menu. "It is a wonderful piece of workmanship.

"I took many photographs—it is a hobby of mine. I won last year the second prize in an amateur contest. It was a picture of submarines at Annapolis.

Studied in Switzerland.

"You see, I always wanted to be a cook, I started my apprenticeship in Switzerland—I am Swiss—when I was 16. Then, too, I like to travel, and a cook travels all over the world, into the corners of the earth. And that is something everyone likes—traveling—is it not?

"I have been to San Moritz, and to Rome. During the war I worked privately for an officer. I have been in this country nine years, and at the Carlton seven years, since it was opened. But I miss the Alps and the snow"—he pointed to a picture of the Matterhorn, pinned to the back of his desk with a thumb tack. "Now, I can climb no more mountains; there is no skiing here." He smiled ruefully.

"What do I like better than cooking? I like to paint—with pastel crayon. I do little now, only a few pictures for my friends; I have little time.

Pretty Dishes Appetizing.

"But I try to make my dishes artistic. Things are always more appetizing if they look pretty. I trim cold salads with flowers—the petals made of tomato skin and pimento strips. I make an alligator pear salad that is very pretty. First I remove the meat in a whole piece, then I fill the shell with chicken salad, then put the meat inverted on the top, and cover with salad dressing and pimento strips and parsley. It looks like a large egg. Sometimes I make a hot pear dish. I take out the stone, bake the pear a few minutes, then fill it with a mound of chicken a la king.

"One should use plenty of color in the trimmings, they make it more interesting.

"Oh, yes, the spun sugar baskets—I'll tell you how they are made." He led the way through the kitchen to the pastry shop.

"First we cook the sugar until it is the right consistency, then pour it out on this marble slab. As it runs over the slab, we take a spatula in each hand, and flick the edge of the sugar into the center, then we add the coloring and pull it into strips—you know, like molasses candy."

Sugar Roses and Lilies.

He took a board from the shelf. Into the little holes on the board he placed little metal rods in a diamond-shaped form. "Then we weave the strips of sugar between these rods while it is hot"—he pantomimed the operation—"and decorate the handle with ribbons of sugar, and make roses and lilies. We pull off a bit of sugar and form it in the palm of the hand to make the petals." He twisted his thumb in the palm of the other hand as an illustration.

"We use these baskets on the banquet tables, filled with little cakes."

His face lighted up suddenly. "You know, my wife and little boy will be with me soon. They spend the summers in Switzerland. My little boy is only 18 months old—I shall be very glad to see him. No, I do not think he will be a chef; he does not eat the right things. Perhaps he will be a doctor."

One of Chef Homberger's recipes is:

Shad Roe en Papilotte.

Saute, in butter, some onions, a little garlic, ham, mushrooms and tomatoes, all chopped fine, until well done. Add a little white wine and some brown sauce. Season well one roe, roll in flour and saute in butter 8 minutes. Cut a piece of paper in the shape of a heart, oil one-half. Broil one slice of ham and three mushroom heads. Put some of the finished sauce on oiled half of paper heart, add a little sherry wine, place on this the slice of ham, then the roe cut in three pieces, then the three mushrooms. Cover with sauce. Fold other half of paper over and fasten on each end with paper clips. Place in oiled pan and cook slowly for 20 minutes. Serve with more of the sauce added separately. Boiled potatoes may accompany this dish.

Monday the Woman's Page will present the seventh of the series of interviews with Washington's best cooks.

Chef Homberger, of the Carlton Hotel, explains how the delicately beautiful spun sugar baskets are made. He also relates his interesting experiences in Egypt; how he kept the Mohammedan cooks from stealing the pastry, how the meats were delivered alive to the hotel. He is primarily a chef, but has won prizes through his hobby, photography, and, as he says, "likes to make pictures for his friends." He gives a recipe that is unusual and interesting.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Returning to London after visiting Lord Edward Keynsham, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, England's young Home Secretary, is abducted by a band of masked men and taken to a mysterious, prison-like house where he is placed upon a gallows. He is told he will be executed unless he grants a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, condemned to be hanged the following morning for murdering a friend of his wife.

A messenger arrives with word that Mrs. Brandt is waiting at Sir Humphrey's London home with new evidence. Promising to listen to her story, he is freed. She tells him there were extenuating circumstances, which she had hidden to protect her name. Sir Humphrey promises to grant a reprieve and she leaves. A few moments later he falls into a deep faint. On being revived he learns Brandt has been hanged.

Mrs. Brandt, on her way to dine with Sir Humphrey, vanishes. A short while later he disappears from his home, evidently abducted. Young Detective Pank goes to Norwich in search of the mysterious prison. He learns that a man named Humble had painted a scenic set, resembling a prison, in a film studio owned by Clarence Edwards. Edwards admits that Lord Edward Keynsham hired the studio. Pank, promoted to inspector, is told at Wandsworth Prison that Lord Edward had sought in vain to visit Brandt. Sir Henry Topps, Lord Edward's partner in a wine firm, tells Scotland Yard officials the nobleman is in France on a business mission.

"I did not say that," he objected. "No; we had a reply to our wireless. It was in code and contained one single word—a word which, decoded, meant: 'Will attend to the business mentioned.' That was dispatched from—well, my geography is not very good—but it was within 50 miles of Gibraltar."

Pank, full of apologies, rose once more to his feet.

"Sir Henry," he begged, it might help toward the solution of a little trouble we are in if you could tell us the names of the guests accompanying Lord Edward."

"I am beginning to wonder," Sir Henry said, with a dignified chill in his tone, "whether I have found my way by mistake into the bureau of a society newspaper. However, your question is quickly answered, sir—I have not the slightest idea."

Pank resumed his seat and the subcommissioner leaned forward with a deprecatory gesture.

"It was very good of you to come up, Sir Henry," he acknowledged. "I thought you might have sent a clerk or your secretary, but to come yourself is a compliment we all appreciate very much."

"You won't mind, Sir Henry observed as he rose to his feet, "if I confess to some slight curiosity. What is this all about? What has poor Edward done?"

Only a Little Matter.

"Nothing whatever I'm sure," the subcommissioner declared hastily. "The only thing was that we thought he might have been able to help us with information concerning a little matter—can't talk about it just yet—sub judice you see—but if he's so difficult to get hold of we must let it be for a time."

"And meanwhile I must bottle up my curiosity, I suppose," Sir Henry remarked with a little grimace "Good thing I'm not a woman. All I can say is, colonel, I shall be delighted to give you any further information I can, but come and see me next time. Come and have lunch with us in the cellars. You shall have your information, and if you get home with it a sober man you'll be lucky. * * * If I'm writing Edward shall I let him know the police are after him?"

"I don't think that would disturb him very much," Matterson said, smiling, as he walked to the door with his guest.

The subcommissioner, after exchanging final amenities with his departing visitor, closed the door and returned to his place.

"Well, gentlemen," he said, "there doesn't seem to be any mystery about Keynsham's disappearance, at any rate, Sir Henry Topps, who has just gone out, is a sheriff of the City of London, the one ambition of whose life it is to become Lord Mayor. He is a family man with a mansion at Esher, and he grows orchids. I feel sure he will do his best to get in touch with Keynsham. In the meantime—what?"

"Is there any news from Chestow Square, sir?" Smithers inquired. "None whatever. Sir Humphrey's secretary is in residence there. He reports an increasing pile of letters every morning, but no word whatever from Sir Humphrey."

Inquires About Hotel.

"And what about the Savoy, sir?"

"I had a report from them this morning. They have locked up Mrs. Brandt's rooms, and everything remains exactly as it was. The maid has been through all the trunks carefully, and reports that nothing is missing. She has repacked and the door is sealed up."

"I think," Pank decided, picking up his hat and smoothing it absently, "that I shall make another attempt to discover something more about Lord Edward's companions on that night. The connection between him personally and Brandt seems absolutely nonexistent. They are men of an utterly divergent outlook and they never appear to have come into contact. If we knew more about those companions of Lord Edward's who were with him that night, it might be helpful. I think that I must pay another visit to Norwich."

"The matter is in your own hands, Pank," the subcommissioner reminded him gloomily. "The only thing I should like to impress upon you both is that none of this is helping directly toward getting Sir Humphrey back."

"Direct means don't seem to lead us anywhere," Pank remarked.

"I think," Col. Matterson went on, "that the terror of the chief's life at the present moment is that some morning one of the sensational papers will discover the truth."

"Might come at any moment," Inspector Smithers commented.

Another Danger.

"There's another danger, too," the subcommissioner confided. "Sir Humphrey has a sister who is a great believer in the press and apparently thinks very little of us. She has promised to keep quiet for one more week and no longer. Supposing nothing happens and she goes, for instance, to the Daily Thunderer—can't you imagine the headlines in the paper the next morning?

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO SCOTLAND YARDS?

The Nation Demands a Clean Sweep.

That's the sort of thing we shall have to put up with."

"I believe," Pank pronounced confidently, "that the solution of Sir Humphrey's disappearance would come in five minutes if we could have Lord Edward Keynsham in this room."

"Why?" Col. Matterson asked.

More Important.

"Because, sir," Pank pointed out, "in spite of appearances there must have been something between him, Brandt and Sir Humphrey which we haven't got hold of yet. Why did Lord Edward Keynsham want Brandt reprieved? Why did Brandt, during his last few hours, when a doomed man as a rule jumps at any chance, refuse to see Lord Edward? Why did Lord Edward call upon Mrs. Brandt? And why, the next day, did she leave the Savoy Court to dine with Sir Humphrey and disappear from the face of the earth?"

"More important still," Col. Matterson put in, "why, after waiting for her for nearly two hours, did Sir Humphrey, left alone in the room for ten minutes, apparently walk out of the window and disappear?"

"All these things are connected, sir," Pank insisted. "It is no good thinking of them in the concrete. There is a single motive underneath the whole business."

"You are right, Pank," the subcommissioner declared, striking the table with the flat of his hand, "and, bear this in mind—it is a motive big enough to make one of the most popular young peers in the country, who is also a millionaire, risk his reputation, to lock the lips of a famous woman like Katherine Brandt and to involve in its meshes a cabinet minister whose life has been one of entire discretion."

"And I expect when the truth comes out," Inspector Smithers said bitterly, "it will all seem so easy. The amateurs in their easy chairs will shake with laughter, and it won't even make a plot for a writer of detective stories."

Pank glanced at his watch and rose to his feet.

"If you will excuse me, sir," he begged, "I think I will run down to Norwich again for a few hours. I'll be back tomorrow. If not, I will telephone."

The subcommissioner nodded. There were lines underneath his eyes and he was really looking very worried, indeed.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I pursue my usual custom. Go about your business your own way. But remember this: The honor of the department, perhaps its very existence in its present form, is in your hands. Sir Humphrey Rossiter must be back in Whitehall a week from today."

After Sleep.

By Katherine Smith.

Though I have slipped into a dream
Of lovely unreality
In sleep, and sought the borderland
Beyond a wakeful troubled sea,

I find myself forgetting all
When I awake. Yet when my eyes
Remember, I know dreams more rare
Than those my sleep could realise.

Capital Girl Was Some Nearer Throne by Paris "Rebellion"

Duchesse de Nemours' Mate Second in Line Should Monarchy Return.

The recent Paris riots which struck terror to the hearts of many Frenchmen, brought the possibility of a royal robe and a crown a little closer to the Duchesse de Nemours, a former Washington girl. For her husband, Prince Charles Philippe, the Duc de Nemours, is second in line for the French throne, his only rival being the Duc de Guise, who is a very old man.

The possibility of the former Peggy Watson's being Queen of France has caused much comment among Washingtonians, who knew her when her mother ran a boarding house on Q street northwest, in order to put the daughter through the fashionable Eastern School for Girls.

She made her entry into international society though a schoolmate, the daughter of the ambassador from Austria-Hungary and was engaged in rapid succession to three millionaires, Richard Vanderbilt, Angier B. Duke and W. Scott Morgan. She married Prince Charles in 1928, and the French royal families refused to recognize the marriage.

Finally in September, 1933, Peggy was accepted by the noble families of Europe. Of recent years she and her husband have divided their time between Paris and their African farm.

Marriage and Career Open to Soviet Women, Wife of Envoy Asserts

Mme. Troyanovsky Tells How Communist Government Aids Them in Both; Contrasts Equal Rights Enjoyed Today With Condition Under Czars; Family Life in Russia Described.

More and more are women making their influence felt in the progressive civilization of the world. In every country they are emerging into the foreground of political and professional life, knitting the world together with their intuitive realization that the problems of each are the problems of all.

This is the eighteenth article in a series of interviews with women of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington, in which they give an insight into the lives of their countrywomen.

By Elizabeth Young.

Marriage and motherhood—or a career. Which shall she choose?

In nearly every country of so-called modern civilization today, the woman of average intellectual endowment must make a choice. Once made, the decision is well-nigh irrevocable.

In America, it is not easy for a woman to combine the two, and most particularly is it difficult for her to turn from marriage into the professions, even under the lash of economic necessity. There is a public sentiment against it.

It is not so in the new Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

There, she may be a wife, a mother, a producer and an earner—with the state's assistance and encouragement.

Sex Equality Rules.

"Recognizing the fundamental social truth that a woman is entitled to fulfill her destiny as a mother, yet express herself as a social being, the Soviet Union gives her every assistance in doing so," Mme. Troyanovsky told The Post reporter yesterday.

Mme. Troyanovsky is the wife of Alexander Troyanovsky, the new and first Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

She was born in Warsaw and grew up in Moscow. She is a quiet-mannered little person, domestic and studious. She has been married for 15 years, and has a 14-year-old son, Oleg, who will enter the Friends School here. And although she herself has been quite content to remain in the home, she looks with sympathetic interest and approval on the great social experiment set in motion by the Soviet government on behalf of women and children.

"The Soviet government recognizes exactly the same right to independence for women as for men," she said. "In the old days, that right did not exist. In the first place, a woman couldn't leave her husband. He might be drunken; he might beat her. But if she left him, he could have her arrested.

Fields Open to Women.

"In the second place, there was not much a women could do to be self-supporting. There was little opportunity for schooling; very little chance to learn any profession. She had no training. There was almost no way her children could be taken care of, if she left her husband and he didn't choose to give her money. She had to remain with her husband. There was the law on one hand—the lack of training on the other.

"After the revolution of 1905 it was becoming possible for women to be trained in the professions.

"Who was responsible for the Soviet recognition of women's importance? The Soviet program provides social justice and equality for both sexes; and besides, women themselves were active in the realization of this equality."

And with this new freedom for women, there has been no appreciable decrease in the birth rate. While women are turning in overwhelming numbers into the industries and professions, they are not shirking the responsibilities of parenthood. This is due for the most part to the protective attitude of the Soviet government toward mothers and children, Mme. Troyanovsky said.

Provisions for Mothers.

"Working women, in factories or offices, are given four months' vacation with full pay, in addition to a stipend to pay expenses of the baby's arrival, when there is an addition to the family," she said. "They are released from employment for two months before the baby is born, and for two months afterward.

"There is much propaganda for nursing babies at the breast, and during the nursing period, working mothers of infants are allowed two hours off from work each day. The average working day is seven hours, although in some cases it has now been shortened to six.

"This means that a working mother is not separated from her child to any great extent. She is able to give him the same attention she would if she remained at home. The children of working mothers are well provided for, during the day, in nurseries and kindergartens convenient to the home, or factory or office. Mothers leave their children in the morning and call for them in the afternoon.

No Illegitimate Children.

"Under the Soviet regime, families where both parents are working have two meals together—a light breakfast and a light supper. They have their principal, hot meal at noon: the parents at their place of work, and the children in nursery or kindergarten. This relieves working mothers of the burden of preparing a large meal at the end of the day.

"All this does not mean, however, that the government insists upon women going into industry against their inclination," she said. "They are perfectly free to remain at home if they wish. There is no tendency toward breaking family ties. The government does not seek that. It simply guarantees care for all children—children whose parents are working; children who have lost their parents.

"There are no illegitimate children in the Soviet Union. We recognize no such distinction. Every child born is a legitimate human being, entitled to the same privileges and opportunities as his brothers.

Her Husband's Career.

"You may judge by my own case," she smiled, "that there is rather a tendency toward strong family ties. I have been married for 15 years, have led a quiet family life, and my family represents a typical, normal Soviet family."

Her husband was the president of the Gostorg—or State Trading Organization—of the U. S. S. R. when they were married. He had been an officer in the Red Army during the revolution. Mme. Troyanovsky was the daughter of Nikolai Petrovich, an officer in the Imperial Russian army. Music and languages were of special interest to her during her school days in Moscow, although she candidly admits she has neglected them for many years. She speaks French, Polish, Japanese and English.

Her husband's first diplomatic mission for the U. S. S. R., was undertaken in 1928, when he was sent as Ambassador to Japan. The family was there five years, and in Japan Mme. Troyanovsky took up the study of English, which she speaks a great deal more fluently than her modesty allows her to admit.

Busy Remodeling Embassy.

In 1933, they returned to the U. S. S. R., where M. Troyanvosky worked with the Gosplan, or State Planning Commission.

They arrived in Washington less than a month ago, and since that time Mme. Troyanovsky has been tremendously busy paying calls, receiving guests, and conferring with architects over plans for remodeling the interior of the Soviet Embassy on Sixteenth street.

"It is a very handsome house, but not a very convenient place for living," she said of the embassy. "A great many changes must be made before it is entirely comfortable."

She has had little opportunity for sightseeing in Washington as yet, but is extremely pleased with what she has seen.

"With so many parks and trees so much greenery, it must be a very beautiful place in the spring. It reminds one a little of Paris," she said.

Vanity Purses Are Attractive Inside and Out

Georgian Prince Contributes Gay New Models to Spring Market.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

When we passed the showcase window of a downtown store and saw the fascinating display of vanity purses, we stopped a moment to enjoy the lyric color combinations. We peered intently through the glass and thought that surely these were the aristocracy of purses. Our guess was straight to the mark. The saleslady gladly showed them to us and explained that they were the gay gift suggestions recently put on the market by a certain Georgian prince.

They were exciting even to look at. We wondered how it would feel to own one. Each purse fulfilled the promise of its rich velvet exterior and opened to disclose a white satin lining gathered into little pockets, one for an ingenious mechanical lipstick, one for a double powder and rouge vanity, and the third for a small flacon of divine perfume. Such a bag with such contents! Side flaps were designed with a little purse for change, a pocket for key, and a third for the comb. A thoroughly practical purse, complete to the smallest detail, and lovely enough for a queen to carry.

Detachable Fur Trimming.

A woman remarked the other day that winter costume jewelry had caught up with her imagination, but it looked as though spring costume jewelry would exceed it. We murmured noncommittally and determined then and there to look thoroughly into the situation. Choosing two well-known shops for our research, we sallied forth prepared for anything—but not what we found!

What delightfully contrary persons these jewelry designers must be! No sooner do they train our taste along certain lines than they turn tables and sponsor something entirely different. One shop was proudly displaying some new gold twin clips, with (imagine it!) mink tails! If one buys a new frock and decides it needs a little fur trimming, the clips are a nice solution.

And then that flamboyant wooden jewelry streaked and dabbed in every conceivable color with no rhyme or reason to the design. This comes in bracelets, pins and odd-shaped clips. It's obviously a season of clips.

The Russian jewelry is just as spectacular in a slightly quieter way. It is made of a nontarnishable metal treated to look most interestingly antique, and set with varicolored stones. These pieces are authentic reproductions of old Russian jewelry.

The other store is having a sale today on its newest jewelry, marcasite set with semiprecious stones. This has a direct appeal to most shoppers chiefly because of its adaptability to all kinds of frocks. For morning, afternoon or night it's equally attractive.

Clipping the Drink Pilferer.

The present trend toward clips is even showing up on cocktails. A Connecticut avenue shop is delighted with the run it's having on boxes of beverage clips, little nontarnishable animal figures, used for identifying glasses. Guests who have the unfortunate habit of leaving an empty glass here and picking up a full glass there will find it isn't half so easy if one is branded with a camel and another with a monkey. Other shapes are the giraffe, fish, elephant, rooster, horse and scotty. They come in sets of eight.

Each box is marked with an appropriate little rhyme:

"When serving cocktails or flipsies,
Or anything else that sipsies,
Be sure that each guest
Knows his glass from the rest
By attaching appropriate clipsies."

Coiffures for New Hats.

A hairdresser who frequently startles Washington with some new, spectacular coiffure, took time out yesterday to be interviewed about a difficult problem. What, we wanted to know, are we going to do with our hair when the new hat styles are not to be evaded. He agreed that before many moons we'd have to put aside the tipsy models we wear now and resign ourselves to wearing bonnets perched on the back of our head.

"And then," he said, "ze curls weel be here—" he made expressive gestures—"and here, and here. And ze bangs! Ah ze bangs!" His face glowed. He explained that he had been making a study of the new spring millinery and was prepared for it. That at least was comforting, for he assured us that any woman at loss how to adapt her coiffure to maedchen hats had only to consult him. If it wasn't becoming, he "feex!"

Muddling Old-Fashioneds.

The new "muddlers" do the most remarkable things. An F street store received a shipment and already most of them are gone. But another supply is on the way.

Muddlers were specially devised to make Old Fashioneds particular pleasures. A rounded wooden knob at the end of the stick is the presser and pusher which brings out the essence from the lime and lemon peel.

But the muddler is good for other things besides. It's a very excellent corkscrew and bottle opener.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Preventing Scarlet Fever.

While physicians and health officers are trying to find satisfactory methods of vaccinating against scarlet fever—methods that are simple enough and convenient enough to give them popular appeal—there are certain simple, homely procedures that mothers can carry out.

One of the trying features of scarlet fever control is what is known as the return case. A return case is one that develops as a result of exposure to a child who has had scarlet fever, but is supposed to be well, and so fully convalescent as to appear safe. Some of these return cases are due to exposure to carriers, and especially carriers that have had the disease within three months. Some of them are due to exposure to cases that have been well less than six weeks.

One method of preventing return cases is to demand a six-week quarantine. If a good isolation could be maintained for six to eight weeks doubtless there would not be many return cases. But when the attack of scarlet fever is mild and recovery is prompt, it is not possible to get people to maintain efficient isolation for longer than four weeks, and even that is often impossible.

Dr. J. D. Rolleston thinks that there will be very few return cases if there be two kinds of isolation. He recommends one in which the rules are strict and enforcement is good. This one starts as soon as the case is suspected and continues for about three weeks. If, at the end of that period, convalescence is well established and there is no rhinitis, enlarged neck glands, and no suppuration of the ears, the first quarantine is discontinued and the second is instituted. It is better to carry out the first quarantine in a hospital—better for the patient, the home, and the community.

The second quarantine or isolation period is carried out in the home. During this period the convalescent child is not allowed to sleep in the same bed with susceptible children. He is required to use his own dishes, silver and linen. These articles are kept apart from those used by other members of the family. They are washed in hotter water and more carefully sterilized by heat than is the case with articles used by the other children.

Waistline Worries Mark Style Show

Paris, Feb. 9 (AP).—The waistline was a source of worry in spring fashion shows just ended.

Although waists were not pinched generally, the preponderance of fancy belts for day frocks and the slim-fitted silhouette of many evening gowns made the slender waist important.

Day dresses were worn with belts of polished leather, metal nailheads, and bright taffeta finished with big fastenings.

Buttons, like golden seashells, silver stars, and wood squares and novelty gloves and scarfs indicated the importance of accessories.

Day frocks of navy, beige, gray, green, and black wools and crepes were designed with a slender silhouette somewhat more straightened than the winter's slightly longer skirts, and with a fairly high neckline.

Jerusalem Artichokes Make Good Change From Potatoes

Favorite Vegetable of Rosa Ponselle Tasty Either Raw or Cooked.

By Ann Barrett.

They go by the imposing name of Jerusalem artichokes. But they look like nothing more than angry potatoes. They're a favorite vegetable of prima donna Rosa Ponselle. And they're good either raw or cooked. (Be sure to look for them in an Italian market, if you can't find them at your regular grocer's.)

To eat them raw, just pare them thinly, then slice or shred them and eat them with French dressing, as a relish or salad. (They look pretty shredded coarsely and mixed with raw carrot.)

Cooked, they have a sweetish, nutty flavor. Just butter, pepper, salt and a bit of lemon juice are the favorite seasonings for them.

How to Cook Artichokes.

You can cook them with their skins on or off, in bolling water to cover. (15 to 35 minutes, according to size.) If you like their outsides bumpy, best cook them right in their jackets and skin them while hot. You may rice or mash them like potatoes if you like, but their texture is less smooth. (They are not so starch as potatoes.) One pound of them will serve four.

Simmered in Stock.

If you have the patience for slow cooking, you'll find artichokes simmered in stock good. Like this: Pare 1 pound artichokes. Cut large ones so all will be same size. Put them into heavy saucepan with ½ cup stock (broth or bouillon) 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 tablespoons butter. Cover tightly and cook very slowly till tender. (Watch and add a bit of hot water if you need to, but the stock should be cooked away when artichokes are done.) Add a bit of salt if necessary. Serve very hot.

Fried Artichokes.

When you're in a mood for fussing a bit here's another good way to cook artichokes: Cook them in their jackets, then peel them while hot. Next roll them in ½ cup flour first seasoned with ½ teaspoon salt. Then dip them in egg (first beaten up with 2 tablespoons milk). Last, roll them in fine bread or cracker crumbs and fry them in deep fat (hot enough to brown inch cube of bread in 40 seconds). Serve piping hot with creamed chicken.

Chocolate Nut Molds.

That's the best of the artichoke story. But here's a good chocolate nut pudding that'll not only fill up this column but make a good ending for most any kind of meal. First, shave 1 square (ounce) cooking chocolate into ½ cup cold milk. Set this on the fire and stir till chocolate is melted and smooth. Then take from fire, add 1 cup hot milk and beat smooth again. Next add ¼ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon butter, few grains salt, ¾ cup dry bread or cake crumbs, 1 egg slightly beaten and ½ cup broken nutmeats. Mix and pour into 4 well-buttered custard cups. Set in shallow pan of hot water and bake at 325 degrees F. till firm. Unmold hot or cold and serve with plain or whipped cream.

Send for Yeast Roll Recipes.

Now that we're at the tag end of winter (the hardest time of year, I think, for planning meals) a good slogan might be "Hand Out the Hot Breads!" Meaning that there's nothing that puts pep into the plainest meal better than light, butter-crusted yeast rolls. If you haven't fully conquered this branch of cookery you'll likely find everything you'd like to know in my newest bulletin, "Popular Yeast Biscuits and Refrigerator Rolls." This includes a basic recipe that can be made up into finger rolls, Parker House rolls, clover leaf rolls, crescent rolls, butter layer rolls, English muffins and many others. Also a quick refrigerator recipe. Send 6 cents in loose stamps and self-addressed envelope with coupon below.

St. Valentine's Dessert Wins Post's $5 Prize

"Charlotte of the Old South" Was Submitted by Ann Linthicum.

Hearts are trumps on St. Valentine's Day. If you are planning a valentine party your guests will be delighted with a valentine charlotte of the old South, the recipe for which has won the $5 weekly prize.

This charlotte, molded in one large heart or small individual ones, and covered with either strawberry sauce or sweet cream, is a dish fit for a king.

Because of its colorful and decorative quality this desert will make a most attractive table. The recipe for it was submitted by Ann Storey Linthicum, 1357 Rittenhouse street northwest. It follows:

A Valentine Charlotte of the Old South.

Stir into the yolks of 2 eggs, slightly beaten, 2 tablespoons of sugar and a few grains of salt. Now scald 1¼ cups of milk and stir the egg mixture into this. Put in a double boiler and stir constantly until the mixture thickens. Remove from the fire and let get cold. Then stir in the gelatin, 1 level tablespoon, thoroughly dissolved, and add the whites of 2 eggs, well beaten. Next add ½ pint of whipped cream, 3 tablespoons of powdered sugar and a wine glass of sherry, or its equivalent in any desired flavor. Mold in either one large heart-shaped mold or small ones for a Valentine party. And serve cold with strawberry sauce.

To ornament the charlotte, allow a package of strawberry gelatin to congeal. Cut into small hearts to use on top for decorating. For a child's party this charlotte can be served with sweet cream if the strawberry syrup is found too rich.

Strawberry Syrup.

Wash and hull 1 quart of strawberries. Crush with a potato masher and add 2-3 cup of granulated sugar, which has been heated in a cool oven. This makes the sugar dissolve quickly and the fruit retains its fresh flavor.

This recipe can be divided and cream added, making a different sauce.

Recipes to be entered in the weekly recipe prize contest should be addressed to the Food Editor, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

What Today Means to You

"Aquarius."

If February 10 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 2:20 to 3:20 p. m. and from 6 to 7 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m. from 4 to 5 p. m. and 8 to 9 p. m.

If you were born on February 10, you are of a rather phlegmatic nature. Many times persons who are apathetic have only themselves to blame for they have allowed themselves to drift into the habit. It would be advisable to force yourself to do a certain amount of substantial reading every day. By exerting your mind to concentrate on some worthwhile subject, daily, you will be surprised in a short time to find how much more active it has become. An active mind is productive of a disposition evidencing abundant vitality. It might be well to remember sluggishness is the result of a lazy mentality. The old saying: "Many men, many minds," should make us realize the importance of being mentally alert, if we expect to be able to hold our own in a newly awakened world of thought.

"The Lost Patrol" Reviewed Yesterday at Keith's, "The Ghoul" at the Rialto

Grim Drama of Desert Exerts Powerful Grip

Victor McLaglen Scores; Karloff Prominent in Both Pictures.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

"THE LOST PATROL." RKO-Radio picturization of a story, "Patrol," by Phillip MacDonald, adapted to the screen by Garrett Fort, starring Victor McLaglen, with Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford, Reginald Denny, J. M. Kerrigan, Billy Bevan, Alan Hale and Brandon Hurst. Directed by John Ford. Reviewed Thursday evening.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Not since "Journey's End" has there been so grim and stark a drama of the heroism of men as this tragic tale of the doom that overtook a little band of British cavalry, lost in the Mesopotamian desert.

There is in the fashioning of the harrowing tale Garrett Fort has evolved from Phillip MacDonald's story of "Patrol" a hopeless inevitability that adds to the fearful fascination exerted by the intensely human reactions of the members of the patrol, hemmed in by the Arabs' invisible ring of death.

When a concealed sniper's bullet ended the life of the lieutenant in command of the little expedition, the secret of the detachment's destination, the purpose of their reconnaissance and their ultimate destination died with him. Under the command of a top sergeant, they reach a tiny oasis where they are able to survive on the plentiful supply of water and the dates growing in the palms. In a night foray by the enemy, their horses, their only hope of eventual escape, are driven off. Then ensues the torturing experience of slow extermination.

Picked Off, One by One.

One by one, these troopers of high courage and indomitable spirit are picked off by their hidden foe. Each fatality adds to the terror of the situation and multiplies the physical and nervous strain upon the survivors. One among them, a religious fanatic, who is imbued with the devout conviction that they are entrapped on the very spot where was the Garden of Eden, loses his mind and eventually his life when he stalks away in the face of death bearing an improvised cross.

In time, only the sergeant is left and he, with a machine gun salvaged from the plane of a slain aviator, accounts handsomely for the marauding nomads who have annihilated his tiny garrison. Mortally wounded in the fray, he expires just as the rescue troop of cavalry comes upon the little oasis, now a burial ground of heroes, each grave marked with the saber of the man who rests beneath his mound of sand.

This is but the groundwork and foundation of the play's rather elaborate superstructure. The lost patrol is made up of colorful and picturesque characters — idealistic youths, the religious zealot, the broken-down prize fighter, an Irishman, a Scotchman, a young English aristocrat, with a philosophical turn and a profound unbelief in most of the things the others hold dear, and one or two whose life has been soldiering. From this divergence of natures, interests and preoccupations emerge moments of keen humor, flashes of touching tenderness and occasional bursts of temper.

Vital, Closely-Knit Drama.

The play is especially well written, never deviating from the realistic reflection of the characters with which it deals. Fear is an emotion that is not foreign to the men trapped by circumstance and a wily adversary and they are heroes enough to admit it. There is about the entire movement of the plot, and every person in it, as a matter of fact, a simplicity and an honesty that add to the power of a narrative that strips away the glamour of war and, like "Journey's End," reveals men's souls at grips with the most overwhelming eventualities the human heart can be called upon to face.

The picture is written and played in a spirit of exaltation that is as inspiring as it is pitiful and futile.

Here, in short, is a subject that rises above the comparatively petty consideration of romance and "feminine interest" to unfold an engrossing study of the minds and hearts of rough, rugged and tender men. It is an experience in the theater that should prove interesting and salutary to every class of theatergoer that cares a hoot about the more substantial aspects of drama.

McLaglen's Best Role.

Granting that the character of the sergeant is one that inspires utmost sympathy, Victor McLaglen plays it with an understanding, an avoidance of overemphasis and a final climacteric frenzy of vengeful triumph that mark the role as the best thing he has done for the cameras—a view which he expressed to this column in a recent wire concerning this picture.

The supporting cast is led by Boris Karloff, as the religionist; Reginald Denny, as the Englishman, Brown; J. M. Kerrigan, at his inimitable and comic best as Quincannon, the Irishman; Wallace Ford, Morelli, next to last of the survivors, who ranks next to McLaglen in effectiveness; Douglas Walton, as Pearson, the kid, who ran away from home, lured by the false glitter of war, and Billy Bevan as the Cockney Hale.

A new Meyer Davis short-reel subject, "Bubbling Over," starring Ethel Waters and an all-colored cast in an amusing comedy of song and fortune telling—in which the star has two good numbers in "Takin' Your Time" and "Darkies Don't Dream"; one of the most laughable of the Scrappy cartoon comedies, "Scrappy's Art Gallery"; a star-packed release of "Screen Snapshots" and the RKO-Pathe News supplement an unusual feature that is unconditionally recommended as a sterling example of realistic and thrilling drama.

The Little Desert Band, Dogged by a Tragic Fate

The oasis in the Mesopotamian Desert, where the dozen members of "The Lost Patrol," one by one, meet death at unseen hands. This grim and intensely interesting study in the heroism of man has Victor McLaglen as its star and enlists the services of numerous others of note in an all-star and all-masculine cast. "The Lost Patrol" deserves to rank with "Journey's End" as one of the classics coming out of the Great War. It Opened yesterday at RKO-Keith's.

"THE GHOUL." Gaumont-British picturization of a story by Dr. Frank King and Leonard Hines, starring Boris Karloff, with Dorothy Hyson, Anthony Bushell, Cedric Hardwicke and Harold Huth. Directed by T. Hayes Hunter. Reviewed Thursday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

After his success in "The Mummy," it is not surprising that Boris Karloff should sooner or later return to an Egyptological motif for a further presentation of his remarkable talents. Gaumont-British it is this time, scooping Universal in its own especial Karloff field, presenting "The Ghoul," as thrilling a narative as you would care to have Mr. Karloff do.

A fast-moving, exciting piece, which is "horror" to whatever extent one is susceptible to cinematic horror, "The Ghoul" revolves around the ostensible return to life of Prof. Morlant, a student of Egyptology, firmly convinced that if he is buried with the precious gem of "Eternal Light," Anibus, the guardian goddess of the dead and protector of the mummy-tombs, will come at full moon and grant him the gift of eternal life.

That is the motivation. Add plot and counter-plot, to gain possession of the priceless treasure, and a gossamer fabric of love interest, and you have "The Ghoul."

Done in a modern age but lit by flickering light of wax tapers, which adds still further to the eerie atmosphere of the professor's home, the story progresses rapidly with the apparently resurrected Morlant striding through the later scenes in pantomime, in a last attempt to regain the jewel stolen from his bandage-wrapped hand, so that when Anubis should come to redeem his soul he might not be found wanting.

Virtually the "Mummy" redivivus, Mr. Karloff scores against a tremendous success, and at the same time further establishes his right to the title of the greatest master of bizarre, make-up now living. His deeply furrowed face, his eyes veritably in pits, his whole body confounded almost beyond description—that is Karloff.

Of the other members of the cast, Anthony Bushell, as one of the professor's heirs, is the only other one whose name rings with any degree of familiarity to an American audience. However, Dorothy Hyson, as the other heir and joint holder of the love interest with Mr. Bushell, is delightful as the harassed heroine. The solicitor, who would have the gem for his own, is carefully done by Cedric Hardwicke. Ernest Thesiger is the man-servant with ulterior motives, and Harold Huth and D. A. Clarke-Smith, as Egyptians, also after Everlasting Light. Kathleen Harrison, as Miss Hyson's friend, and Ralph Richardson, as the cleric up-set at the pagan funeral, add incidental interest.

From the ominous opening, throughout its insidious and thrilling progress and startling finale, "The Ghoul," while not quite approaching an exact dictionary definition of the title, maintains interest and fascinates the imagination, giving ample opportunity to read into the movement plenty of extra excitement.

Supplementing the feature are a series of shorts, quite autithetical, headed by "The Candy House," in which Oswald Rabbit and his sister do a modern version of "Hansel and Gretel," a very worthy successor to "The Three Little Pigs;" a release of the Goofytone News and one of the Universal News. The Goofytone subject is the best of the four issues to date. Just wait until you see that display of toupees for every purpose!

Virginia Judge Acts After Removing Children.

Hague, Va., Feb. 9 (AP).—Judge W. T. Mayo, of the Domestic Relations Court of Westmoreland County today issued an order requiring Richard M. Cannon to file with the court by February 19 a statement showing how the money received from the parents of the children he was keeping had been expended.

Richard Cannon is the son of Bishop James M. Cannon, jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He came here recently from California to establish a school.

Judge Mayo last week transferred custody of the children from Cannon to Lemerle Trader, after investigating complaints that too harsh disciplinary measures were being used.

Senators Ask Miss Bentley Into Hearing

Nominee for Children's Court May Appear This Afternoon.

Sub-Committee Closes Taking of Testimony on Appointee.

Miss Fay L. Bentley yesterday was invited to appear at 2 p. m. today before the Senate Judiciary sub-committee considering her nomination to be judge of the District Juvenile Court.

The invitation was extended in a letter written by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the sub-committee, the other members of which are Senators M. M. Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, and George W. Norris (Republican), of Nebraska.

Miss Bentley's appointment has been warmly supported and opposed at public hearings before the sub-committee, which concluded yesterday. A report is to be made to the full Judiciary Committee at its regular meeting Monday unless something develops to upset present plans, Senator King said. Should Miss Bentley desire to appear in her own behalf it is possible action may be delayed.

Argue Along Same Lines.

At the hearings yesterday the fight was continued along the same lines it had followed in a previous hearing. Opponents contended that Miss Bentley was not experienced in court procedure and insisted such experience was necessary because of the scope of the Juvenile Court, which, they said, had more the character of a domestic relations court with jury trials and other points of procedure and law involved.

Supporters of Miss Bentley insisted that she was learned in the law and met requirements of the law in that respect and in addition was well qualified through social welfare and children's work to deal with the problems of juveniles brought before the court.

"Applying the law is of vital importance. It is of the utmost importance that the question of a person's liberty should be placed in the hands of a judge who has legal skill and ability," Harry T. Whelan, an attorney, urged.

Norris Answers.

"I don't deny there should be a good lawyer on the bench to settle these Constitutional questions," Senator Norris said. "I wonder if a judge wouldn't be a better judge if he had some knowledge of children. I am not arguing a person shouldn't be learned in the law to serve on the Juvenile Court bench, but that the judge should have knowledge of everything modern science has discovered about children as well. The question is what we should do when a person is well qualified in one and not so well in the other."

Amasa M. Holcombe, who supported Miss Bentley, fell into difficulties with both Senator King and Senator Logan while on the witness stand. Senator King said rather sharply that the Department of Justice, which usually makes a report on judges, had made no recommendation about Miss Bentley. Mr. Holcombe had referred to a department report as supporting his views.

Not Controlling Factor.

"The legal aspects are not a controlling factor," Mr. Holcombe stated, when Senator Logan said the subcommittee would have to be guided by the requirement of the law that the judge should be a person learned in the law.

"You disagree with Congress, then?" Senator Logan asked.

"No. I think Congress was right. I think Miss Bentley has the qualifications," Mr. Holcombe replied, adding that appearances in court were not necessary to make a good lawyer.

"You want to set up qualifications of your own and disregard the qualifications set up by Congress," Senator Logan said.

Mr. Holcombe said he didn't want to argue, but had come because he had facts about Miss Bentley's work in the school system. She is school attendance and work permit officer.

Mrs. Riddell planned for results by ordering her Ad to appear seven times for there is no certain way to determine a day when some one will make up his mind to rent. And Mrs. Riddell's plan worked.

Liquor Credit Ban Attacked By D. C. Grocer

Action Forecasts Battle Between Chain Stores, Independents.

A battle between chain and independent stores for the District retail liquor trade was forecast yesterday as the District control act was attacked from a new angle in a letter to Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee.

N. W. Burchell, who operates an independent grocery at 817 Fourteenth street northwest, appealed to the House committee to amend section 35 of the act, which prohibits the sale of retail liquor on credit, save in private clubs.

Burchell insisted that sales on credit would not bring the liquor trade below the "high plane" anticipated by the drafters of the local control law. The credit prohibition, he said, penalizes both the independent stores that operate on credit and their patrons.

The independent store owner also cited reports that the District committee had about decided to delete the present restriction of one license to each chain of stores, if the act is amended in accordance with suggestions of the Attorney General.

Such action, in view of the credit limitation, he said, would constitute further discrimination against the independent stores.

The District committee is expected to act next Wednesday on the proposed changes in the act, after Corporation Counsel William W. Bride reports on the results of a conference with the Attorney General.

3,500 Scouts Here to Mark Anniversary

Troops Will Mobilize at Auditorium; President to Broadcast.

More than 3,500 Boy Scouts will mobilize in Washington Auditorium at 10:30 a. m. today for the celebration of Anniversary Week.

Plans originally called for the general mobilization at various meeting points, with the scouts converging on the Auditorium, led by various bands from Washington High Schools. The intense cold, however, forced a last-minute change of plans.

At 11:45 the scouts will hear a special broadcast from the White House, in which President Roosevelt will extend his greetings and congratulations to Boy Scouts throughout the Nation. Greetings also will be given on the broadcast by Capt. Chester Wells, president of the District Council, and Walter W. Head, president of the Boy Scouts of America. Chief Scout James E. West also will speak.

The scouts will bring clothing and other necessities of life which they have collected to the Auditorium to be turned over to the Community Chest.

Commodore W. E. Longfellow is general chairman of the mobilization. Unit marshals are W. H. McCinnaughty, Edward M. Perkins, William Curtis Cooper and Virgil E. Howard. Cubs, Land and Sea Scouts will participate.

War Disabled Ask Senators For Old Pay

Spurn Roosevelt Offer, Side-Tracking Federal Salary Issue a Day.

Friends of Employes in Committee Plan Floor Fight for 15%.

Battle over increased benefits for veterans in the Senate Appropriations sub-committee in charge of the independent offices appropriation bill is to be renewed in another executive meeting this morning, when veterans' advocates will demand more than the Administration has offered.

The sub-committee met yesterday but failed to agree on a program and adjourned after discussing the question for an hour. The question of restoring Government salaries was not brought to issue. It will be when the independent offices bill gets back to the full appropriations committee some time next week.

Restoration of 5 per cent effective February 1 and another 5 per cent effective July 1, has been accepted by Administration leaders and it is widely regarded as likely to be the program which will be approved by the Senate.

McCarran Optimistic.

Restorationists, however, are planning to renew their fight for return of all of the 15 per cent cut, as well as elimination of various restrictive provisions of the economy law including those governing promotions and transfers.

Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), of Iowa, leaders of the fight for Government employes, said they would seek subcommittee votes on both the salary and other provisions and seek votes in the full committee if defeated in the sub-committee.

The Senators said they were more confident of victory than recently, and have hopes of winning on the floor of the Senate even if beaten in committee. The consensus, however, seems to be that the Senate will not upset the committee on salaries and that the five and five restoration program will be accepted.

What is to be done about veterans' benefits is the question which is occupying principal attention of the subcommittee. Veterans' advocates are not willing to accept the compromise by the Administration.

War Disabled Demand Old Pay.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, announced that President Roosevelt would accept legislation restoring to compensation rolls certain veterans having disabilities presumed to be connected with war service. They would be kept on the compensation rolls until their cases are reviewed. Thousands were stricken from the rolls under the economy law.

Administration leaders in the Senate have warned the President may veto the measure if Congress broadens veterans' and salary provisions too much. This warning is said to have affected several Senators sufficiently to line them up behind whatever the President wants.

Propositions which will be voted on include free hospitalization for veterans unable to pay for it, payment of pensions for widows and orphans of World War veterans, restoration of the amounts paid before Economy act for service connected disabilities, payments to Spanish War veterans, and changed status for emergency officers.

Slot Machine War Declared

Hagerstown Owners Told to Get Rid of Them or Face Raids.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Local authorities have declared war on slot machines and other gambling devices, which recently have appeared in numerous clubs, stores and roadhouses.

Owners of money vending machines were summoned to police headquarters and ordered to remove them immediately, otherwise they will be seized and destroyed, Captain of Police Clarence G. Emmert said.

Local action follows that in many of the larger cities where thousands of machines have been confiscated.

Agitation for the ultimatum here followed the arrest of two men accused of taking two machines near Greencastle, Pa. Police say the business has become a racket and that the machines are hijacked and placed in various establishments.

William Rogan, mine superintendent; Harmon Sutherland, weight boss; Edward Springer and Charles Williams, helpers, were removed to Potomac Valley Hospital, Keyser.

Washington's Feathered Population Fares Well as Interested Persons Provide Food

Snow-Covered Ground Brings Distribution of Avian Tidbits.

Washington's bird boarding house industry took a decidedly bullish turn yesterday as temperatures skidded to new low levels and snow continued to cover the ground, complicating the feeding problem of bluejays, chickadees, quail, cardinals and their less aristocratic kin, the pigeons, starlings and sparrows.

A number of persons have telephoned or written The Post to tell disturbing stories of birds seen scratching vainly in the snow for scraps. Wasn't something being done to tide them over until the ground lost its white blanket and yielded odds and ends for sustenance, the solicitors wanted to know?

Investigation revealed that something is being done in the way of handouts, a systematic feeding program that has been going on all winter. Its sponsors are the Office of National Capital Parks, the Audubon Society, the Metropolitan and Park Police Departments and the Girl Scouts.

Everybody Helping.

Their activities, combined with the attentions paid by thousands of housewives who scatter crumbs and leftovers over window ledges, roofs and streets, are helping preserve the Capital's status as a bird sanctuary, according to authorities.

Every morning cracked corn, scratch feed and raw peanuts are strewn about in most of the circles and all the named parks—Dupont, Logan, Garfield, Meridian Hill, Rawlins, Montrose and many others. The corn and feed are for the birds. Squirrels take care of the peanuts, which they prefer raw.

Many of the squirrels and pigeons eat from the attendants' hands while their less adventurous fellows hold a safe distance. Timid quail, which patronize the feeding stations in Rock Creek, West Potomac and Montrose parks, usually wait until the keeper has gone.

The Audubon Society has an arrangement with Metropolitan policemen in the outlying sections to feed quail and other birds when snow covers the ground. This winter the society appropriated $25 for the purpose, according to Miss Helen Childs, secretary.

More Food Provided.

Girl Scouts did not stop with the Christmas tree for birds which they decorated with avian dainties. All this winter they are maintaining two food trees, one in the Monument Grounds and the other at Children's Hospital.

All the parks have concrete bird baths which are kept in operation constantly as a drinking station. Attendants inspect them daily, sweeping out snow and breaking the ice.

One singer whom neither snow, ice, wind nor rain can stay is the mocking bird which has been the constant attendant of Dr. Alexander Wetmore, ornithologist and assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, some four or five years. His guest, says Dr. Wetmore, is one bachelor who can vocalize delightfully without benefit of bathtub.

The mocking bird perches in a holly tree outside his patron's office in the National Museum, living off the holly berries and fruits of nearby shrubs. A few years ago some of the holly trees were removed for transplanting at Lincoln Memorial. Dr. Wetmore since has reached an agreement with park officials not to molest this particular one and a few others known to harbor desirable birds.

A number of trees will have to be moved back or taken away entirely in development of the Mall, but not these sacrosanct hollies!

The Museum official tells of the spring morning when he sat down before a blank piece of paper and began groping for inspiration to write an article on the song of the mocking bird. Just then his friend, taking in the situation, burst into his melodious routine. Dr. Wetmore went to work.

Remember the childhood rhyme about the "wind doth blow and we shall have snow and what will poor robin do?" The first robin hasn't been reported yet, but there are plenty of other birds that must be fed somehow. In upper photo is Paul Byrne, one of whose daily chores is to scatter grain in Lafayette Park for the birds and keep their drinking supply in condition. Seems to be a popular fellow. Below, left to right, Louise Gordon, Anne Shivers and Laverne Kleinwachter, of Girl Scout Troop, No. 98, who are detailed to keep the northern spruce at Children's Hospital well supplied with suet and scratch feed for pigeons, bluejays, sparrows and all others who'll come and get it.

College Group Opens Meeting

50 Virginia Educators Convene in Roanoke for 2 Days.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Fifty educators from colleges and universities in the State are attending the annual meeting of the Association of Virginia Colleges, which convened here today for a two days' session.

A formal dinner tonight, with President William Mather Lewis, of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., as the principal speaker, featured the program.

Tomorrow the general topic for discussion will be "What Good Is Education?" Three speakers, Prof. D. Maurice Allen, of Hampden-Sydney; President Meta Glass, of Sweet Briar, and President Paul H. Bowman, of Bridgewater College, are scheduled. Officers will be elected and committee reports heard at the concluding session.

Speakers today who discussed newer objectives in higher education included Dean Robert H. Tucker, president of the association; Dean Raymond B. Pinchbeck, of Richmond College; President M. L. Combs, of Fredericksburg State Teachers' College; President Theodore H. Jack, of Randolph-Macon College, and Thomas D. Eason, director of higher education, State Board of Education.

Dean Tucker, of Washington and Lee University, told the association that liberal arts colleges have shown substantial increases in enrollment during the depression years.

He said that liberal arts colleges, exclusive of their graduate or professional schools, had 763,827 students registered in 1930 as compared with 341,182 in 1920.

"Liberal education," he continued, "has invariably been able to hold its own in competition with other forms of higher education."

Hugh Nelson's Funeral Is Held

Early St. John's College Graduate Buried Near Old Home in Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Hugh Nelson, 75, one of the oldest graduates of St. John's College, were held from St. Anne's Episcopal Church here today, with the Rev. Edward B Johnson officiating. Burial was in Cedar Bluff Cemetery.

Mr. Nelson died in Pennsylvania General Hospital, Philadelphia, of pneumonia, after an illness that began January 12.

Born at St. John's, Mr. Nelson was a son of Cleland Kinlock Nelson, president of the college from 1857 to 1861. He graduated from St. John's in 1875. He went to St. Louis, where he practiced law, and later settled in Elizabeth, N. J., as a general insurance agent.

His wife was the former Katherine Peter, of Rockville, Md.

Driver Is Cleared In Coasting Deaths

Accident Cost Lives of Two Youths.

Seaton died at the scene of the crash, and Simpson succumbed later in Gallinger Hospital.

Civil Service Lists to Fill Liquor Jobs

Commissioners Fail in Effort to Dispense Patronage.

23 Present Employes of District Will Be Promoted to Board.

With the District Liquor Board staff to be appointed from the rolls of Civil Service eligibles, it appeared last night that most of the new selections will be in the form of promotions from the ranks of present District employes.

Decision to make the appointments in accord with the 1930 agreement between the Commissioners and the Civil Service Commission, which stipulates that District employes be taken from Civil Service lists, was a victory over the District Commissioners, who sought to dispense the jobs as political patronage.

Jobseekers Disappointed.

The Civil Service Commission yielded to a request of the Commissioners that they be permitted to select the secretary and one confidential clerk without regard to Civil Service rules. This was permitted because of the confidential nature of the work to be performed in these positions.

The agreement blasts the hopes of nearly 1,000 applicants for liquor board jobs, who were of the belief that the jobs would be political plums. Under the agreement, first consideration will be given to residents of the District.

23 Jobs to Be Filled.

The decision was reached at a conference yesterday between Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, and Mrs. Lucille F. McMillan, associate commissioner. After the conference, Mitchell said the District Commissioners had no desire to nullify the 1930 agreement.

Later, however, Commissioner Hazen said the Commissioners had asked that an exception be made in the appointment of the liquor board staff. There are 23 positions to be filled on the board.

The liquor board yesterday granted the first license to the Abner-Drury Co., which has been engaged in the manufacture of 3.2 beer, authorizing the brewing of stronger beer.

Schmidt disappeared January 25, after giving his railroad pay check to his wife.

West Virginia Woman Succumbs to Burns

Romney, W. Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Mrs. Emma Nixon, 44, died at her home at Slanesville yesterday of burns sustained the previous day when she was attempting to rekindle a fire.

Two sons who went to her rescue were burned.

Eastern Rallies, Noses Out Central, 32-31, for Inter-High Title

New Champions Turn Defeat Into Triumph With 13 Points in Row

Nolan Sets Off Spark, Scoring Two Goals in Rapid Succession.

Keyser Hero for Losers; Roosevelt Conquers Western, 44-33.

By the slender thread of a one-point margin, a gallant Eastern High School team yesterday hoisted the District interscholastic basketball crown atop its collective head and left a no-less gallant and stubborn Central quintet the loser in battle best described as bitter.

Out of the bedlam at Tech High gym, where 2,000 maniacal fans gravitated between alternate spasms of joy and despair, Eastern emerged the winner, 32 to 31, to dethrone the Central lads.

Even as the inexorable tick-tick of the timekeeper's stop watch consumed the remaining seconds of the battle, the issue was in doubt and the bark of the final gun found the victorious Eastern team limp from its successful efforts in staving off Central's challenge.

24-19 Lead Overcome.

In defeat, Central booted the dope bucket all over the premises, leading the highly-favored Eastern team by 24-19 during the second half in a sensational offensive engineered by tall, gaunt Cliff Keyser, center, who unleashed an individual scoring attack that dumped 18 precious points through the Central hoop.

With an undisputed claim to the title slipping from its grasp, and a three-way tie necessitating a play-off looming, Eastern uncorked a counter rally early in the third quarter and in one furious scoring outburst salvaged the ball game.

Thirteen consecutive points did the new champions score while Central was held to a standstill, and Eastern soared into a 32-24 lead that altered completely the complexion of the contest. Tommy Nolan set the spark to this scoring spree with a pair of field goals in rapid succession and then the Eastern offensive wheeled into action in earnest with Lefty Bassin scoring on a one-handed shot that tied the score at 24-24.

Bassin grabbed greedily for the individual honors with two more clever field goals that put Eastern in a four-point lead and Nolan scored on another sensational running shot. Edelin's foul goal hoisted the score to 32-24.

Then, as suddenly as they had awakened, Eastern's players suffered a relapse and Central snapped from its lethargy to pick up the flickering torch of competition, fan it to full flame and throw a horrible fright into Eastern's supporters.

Bryant came out of a scrimmage under the basket with a Central field goal and De Lisio caught the Lincoln Parkers napping with a dribble down the sidelines that accounted for another. Bill Bryant made good one of two foul shots and Central was trailing 32-29 with a minute to play.

Fouls Frequently.

Furiously attempting to stem the Central attack, Eastern fouled frequently and both Bryant and Nau were presented with opportunities totie or win the game from the free line, but each missed a brace of tries and Eastern carried its 32-29 margin into the last half-minute.

Keyser then threw himself into the emergency with a far-flung heave from near the center of the floor that narrowed the score to 32-21 and pandemonium poured from the Central stands. With time for but one more heave, Bryant slung the ball at the goal from mid-floor. It hit the back board, bounced off the rim, fell to the floor and Central had muffed its last chance.

Roosevelt and Western put up a spirited battle in the finale of the series, with the Ruf Riders repeating their early triumph by winning, 44-33. Thus, the Georgetown five completed its third year without a victory. Until midway of the third period it appeared that Western might chase the jinx. Led by Cochrane, who later was forced out of the game with an arm injury, Western took an early lead, but Roosevelt gained a 17-17 tie at the half. Black, Smith and Ahearn had hot hands shortly after the second half began, and Roosevelt pulled away steadily. Jessie Black, playing his last series game, led the scorers with seven field goals and four fouls for 18 points.

Preferred Wins At New Orleans

Three Races Declared Off Due to Wet Track.

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, Feb. 9 (AP).—With three races declared off because of the rain and wet track, including the featured 6-furlong handicap dash for 3-year-olds, the substitute eighth race was moved up to the feature spot and the winner showed in C. Troutt's Preferred.

The 7-year-old chestnut, by Ladkin—Pousette, came with a rush at the finish to beat Miss A. Doris' Kai-Finn by half a length. Kai-Finn had led from the sart of the 6-furlong dash, but did well to hold the place safe from H. A. Coulson's Dr. Syntax.

Preferred paid $11.40 in the mutuels to win.

McClane Visitor Here; Seeks Richmond Post

Eddie McClane, football coach at Howard College, Birmingham, Ala., is in Washington visiting friends, while awaiting word from the University of Richmond concerning the coaching berth at that school. McClane conferred with officials yesterday, but a final decision will not be made for several days.

Although he played football for Howard before becoming its head coach, McClane is a disciple of the Notre Dame system. He spent five summers at Knute Rockne's coaching schools and was at South Bend one year for spring practice.

McClane may call on "Dutch" Bergman today at Catholic University concerning a game in 1935. The schools were on the verge of arranging one for next season, but for some unknown reason it failed to materialize.

Cochran Wins Again In 3-Cushion Tourney

New York, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, defending champion, today won his second match in three starts by beating Augie Kieckhefer, of Chicago, 1932 champion, in the world's three-cushion billiard championship.

Cochran downed Kieckhefer, 50 to 35, in 56 innings. He had a high run of seven, against six for his opponent.

Cochran's victory placed him in a tie with Kinrey Matsuyama, Japanese expert, of New York. In today's first match Matsuyama, the National champion, beat Len Kenney, of Chicago, 50 to 32, in 58 innings, tagging Kenney with his fourth straight setback.

Staunton Team Downs Woodberry Five, 35-18

Woodberry Forest, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Staunton Military Academy won its second victory of the season over the Woodberry Forest five here today, 35 to 18.

After a slow start, which found them trailing the locals at the end of the first quarter, the Cadets rallied in the second stanza and were never threatened.

Squashing of Ban On Beccali Urged

K. of C. Wants Italian to Run in March Meet.

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Knights of Columbus games committee today asked the Amateur Athletic Union to reconsider its ban on Luigi Beccali, Italy's Olympic 1,500-meter champion, and allow him to run in the K. of C. meet at Madison Square Garden, March 17. They are willing to stand the entire expenses for his trip.

The A. A. U. executive and foreign relations committees last week decided o have nothing more to do with the Italian this year after he first accepted and then rejected an invitation to compete in four meets here and in Boston during February. Beccali pleaded lack of practice, and said he was willing to come over later in the season.

Hornbostel, crack middle distance runner of Indiana University, yesterday was named by formal vote as the outstanding performer of the annual Millrose Athletic Association track and field games, held last Saturday night in the Garden.

The judges, including officials and newspapermen, picked Hornbostel in recognition of his double-barreled stunt of winning the 1,000-yard invitation in the fast time of 2 minutes 12.8 seconds, and anchoring the Indiana mile relay team with a winning final quarter in 49 2 seconds.

The Road Back to Where?

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9 (Spl.).—There is a prize fight scheduled in the neighboring village of Philadelphia for next Tuesday evening which may have some bearing on the, as usual, muddled heavyweight situation. The former heavyweight champion of the world, Herr Max Schmeling, will exhibit himself for what amounts to the price of a cup of coffee compared to some of the wages he has received in the past.

In his first start in this country since Max Baer swiped him a couple on the chin and knocked him out, Schmeling will return to the wars with his opponent a pretty good young fighter from Penn State named Steve Hamas. I haven't seen Hamas in operation since the night he set Tom Loughran on his pants with a weaving left hook. He must have improved considerably since that time even with setbacks. He is very likely to be the final link in a chain of disasters that has befallen Max in recent years. Schmeling's tumble from the high estate of champion has been swift and unlucky.

Schmeling lost his championship on a cruelly bad decision. He defended his crown manfully against his most dangerous challenger and then saw it lost on a decision that had a majority of the patrons and the press staggered. Next he lost the opportunity to regain it by a third meeting with Sharkey, whom he would surely have knocked out, through a managerial blunder. Der Herr Direktor Yacobs split with Madison Square Garden and took Baer instead of Sharkey. And now it looks as though further pugilistic cabal and intrigue will keep him from ever fighting for it again. Somewhere along the line the Jacobs-Schmeling combination estranged the Carnera mob and as long as Primo is champion it is doubtful whether Schmeling will ever get the shot.

Jacobs' attempts to make a match for Schmeling with King Levinsky in Chicago fell through owing to financial difficulties. That leaves very few parties for Schmeling to fight. Hamas is another poor match for him. Steve is young, rough, hungry and ambitious. He has everything to gain by swarming over Schmeling and trying to knock him out. If the German doesn't stop him in short order and sensationally his stock will drop another notch, even if he wins. On paper, Hamas is made to order for Max, but so was Baer—on paper. I remember how we peered at Baer down in Atlantic City when he was training for the Schmeling match and noted this weakness and that, here an opening for Schmeling's firsts to drive through, there a carelessness or a fault that would be fatal. It all figured out well.

Once the young men climbed into the ring it was just too bad. Schmeling landed one good punch on Baer that didn't turn the trick although it made his knees give. For the rest of the evening Baer moved Schmeling around as though he was helping an old lady across a crowded street. He would take him by the elbow and turn him around and steer him over to a corner where he would clout him to his heart's content. Many of the obvious opening that we saw in training were there all right, but Schmeling was unable to take advantage of them. He admitted that he could hardly hold his arms up after the third round.

On paper we can see Hamas weaving in throwing left and right hooks and Schmeling's straight right countering and beating him to the punch. But I do not trust those paper fights any more. In my mind's eye I can see a couple of those left hooks landing on Schmeling's temple and can see the German again stricken and bewildered from the punches. And one wonders what incentive there will be driving Schmeling on, how hotly and brightly will ambition be burning, how much zest will he have for something that he once had, which gave him not much pleasure, and the rewinning of which is a thousand times more difficult than the original quest.

The political administrations and set-ups have changed since he was champion. And don't think that such things are not important in the gaining of a chance at the championship. Don't forget that Gene Tunney once had a contract with Tim Mara in which Tim was to help him obtain the chance at the title. Jacobs once had some influence. Whether he still has is a question. It doesn't look that way. The politicians have other worries today.

Orcutt Victor Over Hicks In Final

New York Girl Is Beaten, 3 and 2, After Futile Rally Near End.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Maureen Orcutt, of White Beeches, N. J., the medalist and runner-up for the National title in 1927, today won the third annual Miami Biltmore Women's Invitation Golf Championship by beating her perrenial rival, Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, N. Y., 3 and 2, in the 36-hole final.

Miss Orcutt was 2 up at the end of the first 18 holes, and increased her advantage to 4 up at the end of the 27th. Here Miss Hicks, New York metropolitan champion and National title holder in 1931, rallied gamely. When they went to the thirty-third tee, Miss Orcutt's advantage had been reduced, to one hole. However, Miss Orcutt was not to be denied. She took the final two holes and the match.

On the morning round, Miss Orcutt was out in 38 and back in 44 for an 82, while her rival had a 41 and a 43 for 84 Miss Orcutt opened brilliantly, carrying six straight pars to lead 3 up at the morning turn.

Mrs. L. H. Hedrick, of Washington, D. C., won the third flight final round in the annual Miami-Baltimore Women's Championship Golf Tournament here today. She defeated Mrs. C. R. McCubbin, of Kansas City, Mo., by one-up, but was forced to traverse 19 holes in order to win.

It was a nip-and-tuck battle throughout, Mrs. Hedrick squared the match with a 20-foot putt on the seventeenth. She concluded proceedings on the first extra hole by sinking another long putt.

Richmond U. Five Defeats Maryland

Maryland University's basket ball team fell last night before a surprising strong University of Richmond quintet, 44-33, in a bitter battle at College Park.

Richmond amassed a 25-20 lead by half time, led by the sensational performance of Leverton, who ganied high scoring honors with eight field goals and a foul goal.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—Mickey Walker, boxer, has been called to Rumson, N. J., by the serious illness of his mother.

His departure caused the Rumson Bulldog to cancel three bouts, one in New Orleans on February 11, and two in California at later dates.

Virginia Host To Middies' Boxers

Seek to Repeat Victory of Last Year; 5,000 Fans Expected.

Both Teams Carry Into Battle Clean Slates for Season.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Navy's veteran boxers meet Virginia here tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in Memorial Gymnasium, determined to cut short the Cavalier's long string of victories that goes back through 16 dual meets and three Southern Conference championship tournaments.

The Midshipmen are more than anxious to get back at the Cavaliers for one link in the victory chain. Coach "Spike" Webb has ben priming his charges to make amends for the 5-to-3 defeat Navy suffered last winter at Virginia's hands.

5,000 Fans Expected.

Navy's boxers have not appeared in the ring here since 1929, when they won, 5 to 3, before one of the largest crowds ever to see a match here. An even larger throng of close to 5,000 spectators probably will be on hand tomorrow night.

Neither Virginia nor Navy has been defeated this season. The Cavaliers opened by downing Harvard, 6 to 2, and continued by winning from V. M. I., 5 to 3, from North Carolina, 6 to 2, and from Virginia Tech, 5 to 3. After meeting the Navy they end their regular ring card next week-end against Yale in Richmond, then defend their conference title on February 23 and 24.

Navy has defeated Western Maryland, 5 to 3, and North Carolina by the same score as Virginia's. Later the Middies box Penn State, West Virginia, Washington and Lee and Syracuse.

Fete for Officials.

Tomorrow night's engagement is the only one scheduled by the Navy away from Annapolis this winter. Many officers of the Naval Academy staff will accompany the team to the university, and special entertainment has been arranged for them.

Johnny LaRowe, Virginia's ring coach, gave his charges only a light workout this afternoon. They had their last rough work yesterday, and today Capt. Harold Stuart and his mates had only a little work on the bags and some shadow boxing.

There has been much speculation as to whether the captain of Navy's ringers, John McNaughton, would be in action. From Coach Webb comes word that McNaughton will arrive with the squad tomorrow morning, but probably will not compete either as a junior middleweight or as a middleweight.

The last of the university's mid-winter dances will follow the Navy bouts as soon as the floor can be cleared.

King College Weakens, Bows to Milligan Five

Bristol, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Steady team play with smart passing featured Milligan College's defeat of King College here, 39 to 29.

The first half saw a smooth-functioning King team garner 5 markers before Milligan could get started and hold the loop-leading Buffaloes to a 16-15 lead at the half. But a let-down among the Kingmen spelled their undoing in the last stanza.

Losing control of their passing game and lapsing into rougher tactics with frequent fouls, the Kayseeans saw the visitors gradually pull away.

County Games Postponed.

Three league encounters in the Prince George County series were postponed today due to the severe cold. Mount Ranier vs. Laurel in the senior and junior divisions and Hyattsville at Oxon Hill in the senior class were the contests. The games will be played at a later date.

Huston Interested In Buying Dodgers

Likelihood of Purchase, However, Slight.

Atlanta, Feb. 9 (AP).—Col. T. L. Huston, former part-owner of the New York Yankees, told the Atlanta Journal today he was mildly interested in re-entering baseball and "might buy" the Brooklyn club "if the price was right."

Reports from Brooklyn have intimated that the owners might sell the club if a favorable amount was offered.

The Journal said that in the event Huston bought the Brooklyn club, although "the likelihood of this coming about is not very great," he probably would name Wilbert Robinson as manager. Robinson managed the old Dodgers for many years and now is president of the Atlanta Southern Association Club.

Md. Ringmen Will Battle Terrors

Show at College Park to Include Camp Boxers; A. U. Five Plays.

MARYLAND, American U. and some of the boys from the Beltsville and Elkridge camps of the Conservation Corps, ring down the curtain on an entertaining week in college sports. The A. U. five plays Bridgewater, Maryland tackles Western Maryland, and the Conservationists will put on a boxing match immediately following the Maryland game.

Western Maryland played and lost to Georgetown, Catholic University and George Washington, but it showed remarkable improvement with each game, and, whereas it lost the first by some 23 points, its last defeat was by a mere field goal. The Terrors have Frank Cumberland and Jim Draper on the roster, but it seems that the more written about them the less they do.

American U. looked good against St. John's of Annapolis the other night and should be in top form for Bridgewater. St. John's found itself pressed to the limit by Walter Young's men and only a last minute effort put the Johnnies safely home.

Little is known of the Conservation Corps mitmen other than that they met two weeks ago and panicked the audience. The bouts were faster and more skillfully fought than the collegiate fights the Terps have been staging, and the contenders displayed not only an aptitude for giving it, but amazing ability to take it.

Armstrong Victor Over Dunbar, 22-21

Nip and Tuck Encounter Witnessed by 500.

Armstrong's undefeated quintet defeated Dunbar yesterday on the Cardozo court before a crowd of 500 fans in a nip-and-tuck thriller, 22 to 21.

Fenwick and Plummer started the offensive at the first whistle, breaking into a 6-3 Dunbar lead at the quarter.

The second quarter looked like a runaway for the Dunbarites, as the Williams brothers, Fenwick and Plummer located the basket, but Armstrong came to life before the gong sounded at the half, and evened matters with shots in quick succession by Hayes, Covington, Logan and Briscoe. The count was 12-12.

Manager of Jeby Protests Decision

Says Referees Switched in Diamond Bout.

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Hymie Caplin, manager of former Middleweight Champion Ben Jeby, today protested last night's referee's decision that gave Al Diamond, of Paterson, a ten-round verdict over Jeby.

Caplin claimed officials switched referees on him. He made his protest to John Flood, boxing administrator.

Diamond weighed 150¼ pounds; Jeby, 161½.

Caplin was vigorous in his protests because the defeat may cancel Jeby's scheduled ten-round nontitle bout with World Champion Vince Dundee at Chicago a week from tonight.

Navy Changes Satisfactory To Miller

Talked Over Plan With Officials and Fully Concurs, He Says.

Will Coach Line With Cross and Hardwick Under Hamilton.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 9 (AP).—Edgar E. (Rip) Miller, head coach of the Naval Academy football team for the past three years, said today that any changes in the Navy coaching staff for the coming season were "satisfactory" to him.

"We will work with one object: To build a victorious team," he said.

Miller returned to Annapolis today from New York, where he went to address a meeting of the New York alumni of the Naval Academy.

During Miller's absence, news leaked out that he was to be made line coach and that Lieut. (junior grade) Thomas J. Hamilton would be head coach. No official announcement was made, but the apparently authentic report had it that the Navy was adopting a graduate coaching system.

Contract Renewed.

Questioned about the changes, Miller said today that "it is now generally understood that Lieut Hamilton will be coach of the team when spring practice begins on March 14."

"My contract, which was renewed in December, remains in effect as heretofore," he said. "Any changes in the set-up contemplated were decided after full discussion with me and to my entire satisfaction.

"After my contract was renewed the athletic authorities, wishing to take advantage of the experience of the members of the 1926 Navy championship football team, now avilable for shore duty, thought it best to make a rearrangement of the coaching staff.

"The entire matter was laid before me and to cooperate with the plan for the coming season. I thought it best to step aside and let Hamilton take over, under Commander John H. Brown, director of football.

"There was no unpleasantness and everything was satisfactory and agreeable to me. I feel that I have many good friends in the service and I intend to keep those friends."

Under the new coaching plan, Miller is to work with the line. He will be assisted by Lieuts. (junior grade) John H. Cross and Harry J. Hardwick. Cross was a guard and Hardwick an end of the 1926 team.

Tuttle May Help.

Ensign Magruder H. Tuttle, captain and center of the 1931 team, probably will assist with the centers.

Lieut. (junior grade) Henry H. Caldwell and Ensign Louis J. Kirn are expected to report for duty with the back field.

Miller insisted today that the changes had not been forced on him by "the service, the alumni or the sport world."

"They were only made, as I said before, in the interest of Navy football."

Miller said he was not seeking any outside coaching positions, but would "listen" to such offers, as would any coach "in the United States."

Tarheels Battle N. C. State Five

Carolina U. Risks Lead in Race Tonight.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 9 (AP).—North Carolina's White Phantoms, who have thrived on tough assignments, face tomorrow night the most crucial of the several crucial tests that have proved the mettle of the Southern Conference basket ball leaders.

Pitted against N. C. State's Wolfpack whose remarkable aggressiveness has turned the trick against several dangerous rivals, the Phantoms will risk their place at the head of the parade.

It was the Wolfpack, a great second-half combination that has laughed in the face of discouraging scores at the intermission, that gave the Phantoms their only defeat in Southern Conference play, 34 to 30.

There'll be another little matter of the Big Five leadership in the Old North State loop to add zest to festivities. Here the situation is reserved with State a shade ahead by virtue of an additional victory in the left-hand column. Each team has lost a single game—State to Duke and Carolina to State.

Col. Bradley's Boy Valet Pulls Up From Last to Score by 4 Lengths at Hialeah

2-1 Favorite Overtakes Bittybit

Somebody Runs Third; Confident Robertson Up on Winner.

Jaffa Returns $57.80; Gilbert and Coucci Score Doubles.

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 9 (AP).—Col. Edward Riley Bradley, who specializes in winning Kentucky Derbies, evidently has a powerful candidate for the Florida Derby to be decided here closing day. His Black Servant colt, Boy Valet, which suffered bad racing luck and then lost a close decision to Somebody in the Fort Pierce last Monday, raced as if much superior to the half-dozen opposed to him in the Wildwood Purse, mile feature, here today. Favorite at 2 to 1, the bearer of the white and green-hooped silks scored by four lengths, running the mile in 1:38.

A. A. Baroni's Bittybit, one that has raced well in shorter events, saved second money by a length from J. E. Widener's Somebody. Pass Shot only horse in the race not yet nominated for the Florida Derby, was fourth.

Rides Confident Race.

Alfred Robertson rode a confident race on the winner. His mount was last a few strides after the break and stayed there for about half the distance of the race. Meanwhile, the rest of the field were pretty well bunched, with Somebody running Night's End and then Zulu Lad into defeat. The Widener colt and Bittybit were fighting it out for supremacy approaching the stretch turn, but Robertson had Boy Valet tearing along like a streak on the outside. After straightening out for the stretch, Boy Valet nabbed the leaders and moved away from them as if pounds the best. Bittybit outlasted Somebody for the place.

Jaffa, well beaten in two previous races this winter, sprang an upset in the 1-mile opener, which she won by nearly two lengths to return $57.80. Southard closed a big gap to get up for the secondary award, a length and a half before Phantom Legion. G. Haines put up a heady ride on Jaffa, holding plenty in reserve while racing with Quick Step.

Mrs. Fab Triumphs.

Mrs. Fab, a filly that made up many lenghts to finish third in her first start, came right back to win the juvenile event in a drive with the recent winner, Hilise. Canterboy was third. Whoa Back and Broadway Miss swerved into each other at the break and were knocked out of contention. Mrs. Fab broke slowly but clear, and, making up ground rapidly once in her stride, the daughter of Dodge overtook Hilise, the pacemaker, in the last sixteenth to win going away by three parts of a length. The winner was a $3.90 choice.

Machilla, badly beaten a few days ago, suddenly returned to top form with the switch in riders to Silvio Coucci. The gelding just lasted to take the third purse by a nose at $30.50 for two. Bright Bubble, Porter up, made a game try, finishing a length and a half before Moralist for the place. Boy Crazy, heavily backed, was a well-beaten fourth.

Croon Is Victorious.

Earl Porter rode his first winner since his three-day suspension for disobedience at the post when he drove the consistent Croon to a head triumph in the fourth. Fancy Flight, close second choice and a steady winter rival of the winner, was an easy second, 5 spans clear of Lofty Lady. Fancy Flight had all her speed, holding a daylight advantage over Fair John while saving ground. Croon, taken wide, gained steadily in the stretch and caught the pacemaker right at the end. Croon was an even-money shot.

This was Porter's forty-eighth winner of the year and his thirtieth of the current meeting.

Johnny Gilbert's masterly ride on Davoc, $4.40 choice, was largely responsible for that colt's head victory over Rego, the second choice in the sixth contest. The victory gave the Kansas boy a double.

Jockey Coucci earned a double by guiding Eurydice home in the last race. The filly won by 3 lengths. She was the fourth straight choice and the fifth of the day to score, paying $4.10. Grayback beat Bert Lahr a length for the place.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

China's immense encyclopedia, the Yung Lo Ta Tien, was so big that it was impossible to print it. Instead it was "assembled" from books already printed. Only three of the sets were ever assembled—and all of them have been destroyed, the last being lost in the Boxer uprising. The other two were destroyed when the Ming dynasty fell in the mid-seventeenth century.

The encyclopedia was ordered by Yung Lo, third emperor of the Ming dynasty in the fifteenth century. It was the emporer's command that every written work about the Confucian Canon, all of history, sciences, philosophies and arts, be assembled into one set of books—the Yung Lo Ta Tien. The resulting work was a library in itself—22,937 books went into it.

To the Chinese goes credit for invention of the encyclopedia. Their literature increased century after century until the bulk of it was so great that a comprehensive study was beyond the capacity of the human mind. This necessity brought about the compilation of handbooks by which it was possible to trace historical, classical and mythological allusions to their sources. This need for precise condensed information on many subjects brought about the encyclopedia. They differ, however, from the Western works of the same name, in that the Chinese encyclopedia is made up of extracts from existing books.

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 9 (AP).—The Southeastern Conference late today refused to admit another member, abolished football scouting restrictions, re-elected all officers, and prepared for an unexpectedly early adjournment of its annual meeting.

At the Post . . .

Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 9.

Dear Al:

That so-called depression is over, according to Started Cassidy. "Why, I haven't been booed so loudly in years," said the popular turf official today. And it is just possible that Clocker Mike and I have hit another streak. We chased home three winners today, although the prices were nothing to write to the editor about. However, we generally are lucky on Saturday. Tonight we dragged out the speed books, ran several hundred imaginary races, and Mike finally wound up on the schooling list. Providing you have the urge, plus some of what it takes, we are recommending these as the most probable winners.

BILL.

First Race—Miney Myerson has improved several notches since the day he first started at Charles Town. Defeated some good sprinters last out and breaks off the rail tomorrow with an excellent chance of being in front all the way. Judge Schilling has his speed and is dangerous. Broad Meadows is loaded with weight but I always respect Bradley horses on Saturday.

Second Race—Forever Young's victory here stamped this one as a promising youngster. Figures to lead No Saint and Angelico, the latter a recent Bennings winner, to the wire.

Third Race—Bright Beauty has severed her apprenticeship at this course. The mare is now sharp as a tack and ready to bear down. Has the ancient and honorable Stone Martin as the chief threat. Aunt Flor, lightly weighted, will be ready if the top pair make mistakes.

Fourth Race—Brown Toney, a fairly consistent racer, has a victory here to his credit. I'm throwing out that last effort and shall try to make him scamper home ahead of Sassafras and Coequal.

Fifth Race—Clarify has done about everything asked this winter. Shapes up well in this field despite that assignment of 119 pounds. Big Beau gets in with a mere 104 and Clocker Mike has given the okay on trials. That outing the other day might hav put this one on edge.

Sixth Race — Feudal Lord, scratched yesterday, meets a speedy crew here. He can do no loafing. If he runs his real race, I look for him to take care of Mountain Elk and Character.

Seventh Race—Sandwrack is dangerous whenever the odds mount. He showed his real form when he first arrived here

Virginia Tankmen Will Oppose Duke

University, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Virginia's chances of retaining the Southern Conference swimming title will be better known tomorrow afternoon when the Cavalier tankmen meet the Duke University swimmers who were runners-up in the tank meet last March.

Last Saturday the Virginians nosed out North Carolina State by 3 points. This is just a few points less than the Blue Devil water team won over the swimmers from Raleigh.

Virginia was somewhat handicapped last Saturday by the fact that Dick Graveley, conference champion dash swimmer and diver, had just gotten over a cold and was not at his best. By taking first place in diving over State, Graveley helped his mates overcome a lead and win in the last event.

Stocks Yield As Regulation Steps Loom

President's Stand and Bill Studied; Sales Reach 3,300,000 Shares.

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Stocks went down today as traders anticipated the regulatory legislation prepared for them at Washington.

Texts of the President's message and the first bill were not made public until markets here had closed, but Wall Street had a good idea of what the Congressional measures contained and apparently viewed the whole program as one that would meet the purpose of restricting "naked speculation."

Shares had extreme losses of 1 to 3 points; this range was reduced to about 1 to 3 net, although prices on Pacific Coast exchanges went somewhat under those here, markets there having had opportunity to study the actual proposals. Sales approximated 3,300,000 shares.

Bill Creates Confusion.

Considerable confusion was evident in commission house circles as they went over summaries of the Senate bill. Particularly of interest were the margin provisions, which are well above current requirements.

What effect the proposed changes might have on speculative positions became a matter of lively interest; undoubtedly a substantial readjustment in these went on this afternoon.

Regulation has been in the offing for months and it has been widely expected that pool activities were to come under Federal ban. In general, conservative opinion has held that Government control would have constructive results in the long run, especially if it strengthened public confidence. The real background of the market, it is pointed out, is the state of business and the earnings of business, and the congressional program finds these on the upgrade.

Evidence of Recovery.

For the past several weeks there has been little interruption to the flow of favorable evidence on the industrial recovery, and today brought additions to the record.

Retail and wholesale trade, Dun & Bradstreet reported, maintains its "consistent uptrend" and prospects become "more encouraging as the spring season approaches with its normal concomitant of increased employment and broadened industrial activity."

All reports to the agency indicate that retail buying exceeds that of a year ago while a majority reveal "some gain over the previous week's good level."

Freight loadings in the week ended February 3 reached a total of 583,098 cars, up about half of one per cent from the previous week and 16.7 per cent from the 1933 week traffic volume is approaching that of two years ago.

Building Permits Up.

Building permits for January, on the basis of data collected by one agency, are nearly 14 per cent above January, 1933. Favorable dividend actions hold a prominent place in market news, Kroger Grocery today declaring an extra of 50 cents. The stock rallied a point.

Stocks showed general declines, though some of the larger losses were in shares which had enjoyed the strongest markets during the recent boom. U. S. Smelting, Case, Allied Chemical and Union Pacific were down 4 to 5 before finding new buyers. Air craft again found heavy weather, while rails and leading industrials finished with numerous losses of 1 to around 3.

Chrysler, which earned $2.78 a share last year against a deficit in 1932, yielded more than a point. The 25 cents quarterly dividend declared by this company's directors after the close compared with two payments of 50 cents each in the last six months, neither of which, however, had been designated as a "regular."

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Men's Clothing—Manufacturers are reported operating on the basis of full production in many instances. Employment at some plants is said to be the highest in more than four years.

Zinc—Producers look for an early expansion in demand in connection with the rising activity in steel and other consuming industries.

Wash Goods—New business is running at a slower rate than last week, according to some selling circles, due to the fact that most convertign houses have little or no available deliveries on the fancy cotton dress goods which are in most demand.

Steel Scrap—A canvass of leading markets indicates that Pittsburgh and Cleveland are most active. The movement of material is small in other districts.

Robey's Review

President's Statement on Desirability of Lower Interest Rates Raises Question Whether Earlier Policies Now Repudiated.

By Ralph West Robey.

No amount of analysis and examination of President Roosevelt's intimation that he thinks interest rates on outstanding indebtedness should be reduced has enabled those trying to appraise the future to decide what he has in mind. The statement itself, of course, was simple and is easily understood. Also it is easy to conceive various ways by which interest rates might be cut. This, however, is all superficial. What one needs to know is the goal to which the President is working and the line of reasoning he has followed in getting to his present conclusion. Upon the answers to these queries, many analysts believe, may rest a major factor in the future financial policies of the Administration.

Judging by the stories in the press the only thing involved is a desire on the part of the President further to come to the aid of debtors. Thus it was emphasized that he feels much of the present debt burden is unbearable because of the high rate of interest it bears. It is his opinion, accordingly, that if this rate could be reduced the debt could be carried and insolvencies and financial hardships prevented.

Increased Security Traded For Lower Rate of Return.

Further, the news dispatches stressed that the President believes such a reduction of interest should be possible because of the greater security that thereby would be provided the creditors. In other words it is held, that with the present high rates the entire investment is endangered and the creditor is in constant risk of losing everything. With a reduction in the rate of interest this danger would be removed to a marked extent and the creditor, while getting a lower return, would enhance the total value of his investment by the removal of the danger of complete loss.

Perhaps the first thought that occurred to any one in reading of this point of view was that the President must have revised his ideas on the tactics to be followed in making the debts of the country less burdensome. Until now the "official" point of view has been that the debt burden would be solved by getting a higher price level. In fact, this has been given as the reason for practically the entire financial program to date. Because of it we suspended the gold standard, repudiated the Government's contract on its bonds, drove the dollar to an artificially low rate, adopted a gold-buying program, and finally devalued the dollar. Each of these steps, we were told, was for the purpose of getting higher prices, and the purpose of getting higher prices was to make the debt structure of the country less burdensome.

Generally Held Higher Prices Do Not Help Debts.

Now it is true that in the opinion of most trained observers a rise of prices caused by artificial means does not ease a debt burden, but this is beside the point. The significant thing is that up to the present the Administration has taken the position that higher prices would give such relief. When an entirely new policy is thrown in our face as a means of easing the debt burden, accordingly, one can not help but wonder whether the Administration has given up hope of getting higher prices or at least has changed its views on how much help such an increase would be. Certainly if one saves a drowning man in one way there is no occasion to save him in another way.

It does not seem to me probable, however, that President Roosevelt has repudiated his earlier views on the beneficial effects of higher prices in any such wholesale manner. Accordingly, I think one must look in other directions for an explanation of his present attitude on the rates of interest. Specifically I think it well to consider the possibility of his beeing convinced that interest is a burden on society and something that in the "ideal state" would not exist. If, by any chance, this is the case, I wonder if in due time he will maintain that the Government should be able to borrow without interest? Should he take this view and be able to sell it to the public, it would put an end to the principal argument against the issuance of "greenbacks."

Curb Market Turns Heavy; Closes Down

All Departments Join in Declines; Sales Total 498,000 Shares.

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—The curb market closed heavy today following the renewal of selling in virtually all departments of the list. Prices eased off quietly in the forenoon but pressure increased in the late dealings. A slight recovery occurred in the final minutes of trading.

Utilities and a number of industrial favorites were marked down sharply. Aluminum Co. of America and General Tire & Rubber dropped 5 points each. Gulf Oil lost 3½ while other petroleum shares yielded fractionally. Aircraft shares were in further supply. Pan-American Airways sagged more than 2 and Waco eased nearly a point.

Among the power group, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore and Columbia Gas & Electric preferred lost more than 2 each. Electric Bond and Share conceded nearly as much and American Gas & Electric and American Light & Power around a point each. Other stocks dipping about a point or more included Parker Rust Proof, Newmont, Hiram Walker and Lake Shore. Glen Alden Coal was an isolated steady spot.

Transfers approximated 498,000 shares, about the same as yesterday.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was a more active today, especially industrials and rubber shares, which hardened. Shipping issues benefited on the Cunard-White Star plan, while transatlantic securities, which started well, failed to maintain all their gains. Kaffirs were supported by continental buying and British issues also were generally maintained. The market closed steady.

Paris—Price fluctuations continued on the bourse. Profit taking lowered French issues, while the rally in Wall street lifted international stocks. The closing was steady.

Berlin—The lowering of discount rates in the United States and indications of further American interest reductions abroad caused a general upward movement on the boerse. After a weak start, prices closed firm.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 9 (A.P.).—Going above $14 for the second time this season, the Lexington burley tobacco market today disposed of 1,782,585 pounds of leaf for $257,964.87, an average of $14.47 per hundred. The price range was from $2 to $31.

Bonds Decline Two-tenths in Lighter Sales

Traders Become Cautious; Turnover Is Cut to $15,717,000.

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—The bond market picked up some of the nervousness of stocks today and prices in most categories slipped moderately lower.

Trading enthusiasm slackened perceptibly, transfers totaling only $15,717,000, par value, against $19,291,000 yesterday.

It was the smallest aggregate for a full session since January 29. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues eased two-tenths of a point.

Traders Inclined to Pause.

While the President's message recommending the enactment of a bill for the Federal regulation of speculation obviously did not apply to the general run of bond dealings, both traders and investors displayed an inclination to lighten commitments and stand aside until the equities division showed signs of settling.

There was still plenty of bright business and industrial news. Freight-car loadings for the week ended February 3, recorded a seasonal gain and week-end trade reviews reported a continued expansion in retail sales. International dollar rates were narrow and the European situation appeared to be improving.

Cuban Loans Rally.

Some Cuban loans rallied on the assumption that the President's recommendations for new sugar quotas were quite bullish for Cuban producers. Most of these issues, however, later yielded the greater portions of their gains.

An advance of 3 per cent in the price of tires did not seem to stimulate rubber company bonds to any great extent, although they finished fairly steady.

The recent speculative rail favorites declined a point or more, but a number of prime investment carrier issues were slightly higher. Various secondary utilities were also somewhat lower, although such issues as those of American Telephone and Consolidated Gas were unchanged to fractionally higher.

Large Waterworks Sale.

There was an exceptionally large turnover of American Water Works 5s at a loss of 2½ points of their more than 6-point gain of yesterday. Some of the industrials sagged, but not too seriously.

Only about $600,000 of U. S. Government securities changed hands and minor declines predominated in this section.

Foreign obligations were irregular. Those of France reacted 1 to 3 or more and the Brazilians and Colombians were down 1 to 2. Government issues of Cuba, Argentina, Germany, Austria and Poland advanced 1 to around 2.

The New York Stock Exchange reported that all listed bonds, as of Febraurary 1, had a market value of $36,263,747,352, as compared with $34,861,038,409 on January 1.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Aggregate sales of 22 chain store systems for January amount to $194,229,445, an increase of 15.3 per cent over a year ago. The December gain for the same companies, in comparison with the previous year, was 12.7 per cent.

Bond offerings by New Hampshire and Maryland account for more than half of the $10,117,730 total of all State and municipal financing scheduled for next week, says the Daily Bond Buyer. Maryland is offering a $3,000,000 issue of unemployment relief bonds and $492,000 general bonds on Tuesday, while New Hampshire will be in the market with $2,400,000 on Thursday.

The number of way bills for less-than-carload lots of freight issued by the Pennsylvania Railroad increased from 273,000 in December when door service became effective to 359,000 in January. Twenty-one per cent of the way bills specified the new service in January. Several other roads, including the Chesapeake & Ohio, Pere Marquette, Erie and Nickel Plate, have started similar service, but their results have not been announced.

Information received by B. W. Dyer & Co., sugar brokerage firm, says that Java has accomplished a 46.3 per cent cut in sugar production during the present season. Output for the 1933-34 season is 1,379,186 tons compared with 2,560,254 in the previous season.

Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. estimates its sales for the four weeks ended January 27, at $59,922,780, an increase of 4.7 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933. Tonnage sales, totaling 356,514, were off 4 per cent.

Japan's Ruler Gets Data On Dollar's Devaluation

Tokyo, Feb. 9 (AP).—If Emperor Hirohito doesn't know all about dollar devaluation today, it isn't Finance Minister Koretiyo Takahashi's fault.

Complying with an imperial command, the minister delivered a one-hour lecture before the Emperor on the subject: "Devaluation of the American dollar and its effect on Japan."

Wheat Values Sink on Hope of Drought Halt

Selling Is Laid to Stand for U. S. Crop Control; All Grains Drop.

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP).—Downswings of values predominated in grain markets today, influenced by likelihood that drought districts would receive moisture relief tonight and because of stock market unsettlement.

Much selling of grains was associated with expected bearish results of a special message from President Roosevelt to Congress relative to Federal Government control of stock exchanges.

Wheat and other cereals gave evidence also of disturbing effects from proposed legislative measures which would tighten restrictions on grain exchange dealings.

Wheat Closes Nervous.

Wheat closed nervous at almost the day's bottom prices, ¾ to 1¼ cents under yesterday's finish; corn, ⅝ to 1⅛ down; oats, at ⅜ to 1 cent decline, and provisions varying from 5 cents setback to a rise of 7 cents.

Nearly from the outset, wheat prices were under a drag owing to forecasts, pointing to possibilities of rain or snow tonight in western Kansas and western Nebraska.

Special significance was attached to the outlook as regards Western Kansas, that section of the State containing almost one-third of the total wheat acreage of the entire country. It was also emphasized that western Kansas has been one of the driest sections of the huge area of wheat land which has long been suffering from lack of moisture.

Aid to Selling.

Adding to selling pressure on all grains and to dearth of adequate buying was word from Washington indicating that the Government would disregard protests against imports of rye. The ground taken was that owing to shortage of the domestic crop of rye, and also because of distillers and millers' needs, large imports were required.

Another bearish factor as to grains in general was a report that the Pacific Coast was offering 100,000 barrels of flour delivered at Jacksonville, Fla., and to Gulf of Mexico cities cheaper than flour could be shipped from Kansas City.

Corn and oats followed the downward trend of wheat. Shipping calls here for corn was extremely light. Provisions averaged higher, responsive to a rather broad demand for lard.

New York, Feb. 9.—The Daily Weighted Price Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., closed the past week at the peak for this year and likewise at the highest point since the latter part of July, last year. The index, responding to the new monetary plans of the Administration, rose to 106.28 on February 1, comparing with 104.23 a week ago, an increase of 2.05 points, and contrasting with 68.11 on February 1, 1933, or a rise of 56 per cent. Only copper and tin displayed weakness during the week, with a majority of the other commodities included in the index showing higher quotations.

Radio Waves And Ripples

SCARCELY a month ago Arthur Godfrey was looking for a job. Monday night he takes a sleeper for New York to broadcast his first network program.

Columbia has assigned him the 3 p. m. spot on Tuesdays and Thursdays and promised an orchestra and all the live talent his heart desires. The red-head has landed in big time with a show of his own.

Godfrey will continue as master of WJSV's Sun Dial, the minds having gone so far as to arrange to wire the breakfast broadcast from New York to Washington, an unprecedented procedure. Each Monday and Wednesday night Godfrey will carry advertising from Washington merchants to New York for broadcasting. It is the first time in the history of local radio that anyone has gone so far to put on a Capital broadcast.

For many years Jim McGrath, WRC announcer, has wanted to meet Dr. William Mann, director of the Zoo.

Yesterday, when he had just about given up getting his car started and meeting Dr. Mann, who should come along to push him but a car in which rode Dr. Mann.

McGrath's auto refused to run, but he and Dr. Mann had a nice long talk together in the reptile house.

Howard Hanson's "Merry Mount," played its premiere at the Metropolitan, is N. B. C.'s opera broadcast this afternoon.

The opera takes for its dramatic material the intense religious prejudice and superstitions of the early Pilgrim Fathers.

Its cast includes Lawrence Tibbett, Gladys Swarthout and Edward Johnson.

American broadcasters will have their first opportunity of putting a coronation ceremony on the air, when Henry Pu Yi is crowned Emperor of Manchukuo. N. B. C. will relay a description of the event from Hsinching February 28, via a short-wave circuit from Japan for 15 minutes.

Thanksgiving probably got started this way:

Men who have found work in the PWA and the CWA will gather in San Francisco tomorrow night to sing their gratitude to President Roosevelt.

Minute Movies — By Ed Wheelan

Part of it will be broadcast by N. B. C. at 11:30 and will be relayed to the White House.

Charles Webster, who has played the role of Lincoln long enough to be considered the radio voice of the Emancipator, will appear twice in N. B. C.'s Lincoln birthday programs Monday. He will be Lincoln in the Radio Guild's production of "If Booth Had Missed" at 3 p. m., and in the historical sketch, "Lincoln," at 8.

The oldest symphony orchestra in the United States, second oldest in the world, is the New York Philharmonic - Symphony Orchestra, which this week appealed to the Nation's radio audience for funds to maintain life.

The Philharmonic played its first concert in the Apollo Rooms on lower Broadway December 7, 1842. It has performed every season since then, without a cancellation and with but two postponements, one when Lincoln died and the other at the death of Conductor Anton Seidl.

Three concerts were given that first winter of 1842. During the 1932-33 season the Philharmonic played 127 performances, including educational concerts for young people. The present organization represents a merger of the Philharmonic and the New York Symphony in 1928.

Getting Personal . . .

Neither Ruth Etting nor Connie Boswell is superstitious . . . Ruth opens her automobile series on C. B. S. February 13, and Connie joins Glen Gray and his Casa Loma Orchestra on their cigarette commercial the same night, succeeding Irene Taylor and proving that even a radio editor knows better than to say "neither Ruth Etting nor Connie Boswell ARE" . . . At the Lakeview Golf Club, in Los Angeles, Bing Crosby shot a 74 and rescued the club manager and secretary tied up by bandits, all in one day . . . Annette Hanshaw and Conrad Thibault are undergoing one of those off-season romances . . . Wos Vaughn, formerly with Ted Weems and Guy Lombardo, will vocalize with Freddy Martin's Orchestra on N. B. C. from the Savoy-Palaza . . . with high leather boots, bright calico shirts, overalls and felt hats turned up in rough-rider style and pinned with immense safety pins, Pappy, Ezra, Zeke and Elton tie up traffic every day on their way to Radio City . . . Pappy is 69, stands 6 feet and 2 inches and weighs 250 pounds . . . it is rumored that Pappy once taught English at a West Coast university.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY All Sweet Again By Harry J. Tuthill

MY WORD, SISTER, BUNGLE, DID I SEE YOU TALKING TO THAT LADY NEXT DOOR JUST AS I TODDLED UPSTAIRS?
YES, SHE TOOK ME OUT TODAY TO LOOK AT A FLAT RIGHT NEXT TO ONE SHE RENTED.
WHAT! WHAT! LISTEN JO, DO YOU MEAN THAT AFTER ALL THE TROUBLE YOU HAD WITH HER FOR PHONING THE LANDLORD ABOUT YOU AND..?
HE'S THE ONE WHO REALLY CAUSED ALL THE TROUBLE BY REFUSING TO MIND HIS OWN BUSINESS.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 2-10.
HIM? THE LANDLORD? LISTEN, YOU ADMIT IT ALL STARTED WHEN YOU SAID SHE TOOK YOUR DAY IN THE LAUNDRY, RIGHT?
THE WHOLE AFFAIR WAS JUST A MISUNDERSTANDING UNTIL THAT INSIPID MAN CALLED ME UP AND INSISTED ON TELLING ME A LOT OF THINGS I KNOW NOW SHE DIDN'T SAY.
MY WORD, WHAT A SITUATION! BLAMING A MAN BECAUSE HE SAT UP NIGHTS TRYING TO FIGURE OUT SOME WAY TO GET YOU TWO LADIES TOGETHER.
HE'S AN OLD TROUBLE-MAKER.. THAT'S WHY HIS FIRST WIFE LEFT HIM. OH I HEARD THINGS ABOUT HIM TODAY. LOTS OF THEM.

JOE JINKS, Featuring Dynamite Dunn Wow! By Llanuza

JUST WHEN THINGS SEEMED BLACKEST, JOE GOT AN IDEA... IT HIT HIM SO HARD THAT PETE THOUGHT JOE HAD HAD A STROKE.....
BUT, SAY, JOE... WHAT IS THIS BIG IDEA O'YOURS?
LISTEN, PETE.. YOU KNOW HOW THE SPORTS WRITERS WOULDN'T GIVE ME A STUMBLE ON DYNAMITE'S RETURN?
YEAH!... I KNOW
WELL, 'TILL THEY DO, I CAN'T GET HIM A REAL BOUT. THE BEST OFFER I HAD SO FAR IS FROM BIG JIM KELLY... AN HE TROTTED OUT A LOTTA TRAMPS FOR DYNAMITE TO MEET
IT WOULDN'T PROVE NOTHIN' FOR HIM TO TAKE ANY ONE O'THEM.. BUT IF HE TAKES A WHOLE BUNCH.. ONE AFTER ANOTHER IT'D BE A SENSATION!
IT SURE WOULD!

DICK TRACY Evidence!

Walt Mason, Himself

Great Authors.

When authors rise to world-wide fame it is my duty to peruse the books in which they play their game, in hopes they'll please me and amuse. And often it's a weary task that bores my days and spoils my nights; and when I've read a while I ask, "How did this author scale the heights? His narrative is gray and stale, there is no flash of humor there, and nothing happens in the tale to elevate the reader's hair. It treats of women pouring tea, discussing milliners and mice, of curates undereath a tree discussing things that cut no ice. It treats of old men in their chairs bewailing glories of the past, of young men climbing clubhouse stairs to get an ice cold drink at last. This is no tale of fire and flood, no tale of crime and sleuths and clues, there is no scrap to fire the blood, or rouse one from a threatened snooze. No war-horse in its pages pants, no armored knight his course will run; it is a tale of maiden aunts and pointless twaddle by the ton. It treats of ladies on the lawn, who talk of lingerie and lace; it is a tale that dawdles on, and never reaches any place." Such reading is a grievous chore, but every time I leave my shack, I'm questioned by some dismal bore, "Say, have you read James Bildad Black?" And I feel guilty when I say I haven't read that author smart; and then I spend a weary day perusing books that break my heart.

Reaching a Grand Slam.

Two things are very essential in the bidding of a Grand Slam. The first is information as to first-round control of each of the four suits, and the second is that there be sufficient low-card tricks, either established or easily establishable, on which to discard losers in one hand or the other. Grand Slam bids, of course, are unusual. It is an extraordinary event when the partners find such perfect fits and so many high cards that a contract to take all 13 tricks is taken out of the realm of the impossible and removed to the realm of the probable.

The hand below, which was played in a recent championship tournament, is an example of accurate bidding to reach the desired result.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A 7 3 ♡ A K Q 10 8 3 ◇ 6 4 ♣ 9 7
♠ 10 6 ♡ 5 ◇ K Q J 5 2 ♣ K J 5 4 2	N W E S	♠ 8 5 ♡ J 7 6 4 ◇ 9 7 3 ♣ 10 8 6 3
	♠ K Q J 9 4 2 ♡ 9 2 ◇ A 10 8 ♣ A Q

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♡	Pass	2♠(1)	3◇(2)
3♡(3)	Pass	3♠(4)	Pass
4♠(5)	Pass	4NT(6)	Pass
5NT(7)	Pass	7♠(8)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A Forcing Takeout. South has four honor-tricks, and while it is true he does not have an especially good fit with his partner's suit, the hand is so strong that a Forcing Takeout must be made.
2—West, not vulnerable, seeks to obstruct the march of his opponents to game.
3—Some players would bid four hearts with this hand as showing a practically solid trump suit with not more than one loser, but North felt that since he was bidding three hearts freely, he was showing a strong hand.
4—Showing Rebid values in the spade suit.
5—Inasmuch as South has twice bid the spade suit, North now shows that he can support it.
6—The conventional bid showing two Aces and the King of a bid suit.
7—The conventional response.
8—An equally logical bid would have been seven notrump. In rubber play seven spades is to be preferred. In match-point play seven notrump offers the chance to make the highest possible score.

There is, of course, nothing to the play of the hand, as South has seven spades, four hearts, one club and one diamond available, and thus makes the Grand Slam contract laid down.
